START WORK ON NEW POSTOFFICE BEFORE SEPT. 10

Contract Is Finally Let for Building.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special]—Actual work on the new Chicago postoffice will be under way the last week in September, George Griffiths, head of the Griffiths & Co., Chicago contracting concern, asserted after the treasury had awarded the main construction contract to his company. The contractors plan to complete the main building by November, 1932, and have the whole structure finished and turned over to the government within less than two years.

GEORGE GRIFFITHS

In announcing award of the construction contracts today the treasury stated that the total contract cost of the building, which will be the world's largest postoffice, will be just under $12,000,000.

The main structure award went to Gilbert for $13,459,976. The Westinghouse Electric Elevator company of Chicago was given the contract to install the elevator plant, the price being $750,000. The mail handling equipment award went to the Lamson Company, Inc., Syracuse, N. Y., for $1,768,000. The total for all three contracts was $15,959,547.

Total Cost 22 Millions.

The actual cost of construction of the building plus the cost of the site of approach if not exceed $22,000,000, treasury officials declared today. Congress appropriated for this purpose $16,000,000. The treasury is permitted, however, to exceed legal appropriations by 5 per cent in accepting contracts.

Additional millions also will be provided by the government for furnishings and equipment.

Award of the contract will prove a boon not only to Chicago workmen but to the building and industries which will furnish the materials. The contract today that probably as many as 14,000 men would be employed on the work. Mr. Griffiths said as many as 3,500 would be employed on the postoffice structure when the work reached its peak. Another 10,000 men, he said, will obtain work in the plants furnishing materials. Large quantities of steel, sand, lumber, and stone must be furnished.

Nine Years of Preparation.

A sudden sigh of relief went up in the treasury and postoffice officials when the decision to award the contract finally was reached and the actual work laid for beginning the long delayed project. Almost five years was consumed by the government in authorizing the building, acquiring sites, preparing designs, and awarding the contract.

Chicago, however, took pride in the selection of the new Chicago federal building. They asserted it would give Chicago the largest, most modern, and best equipped postoffice in the world. It was stated that the contract calls for the largest and most costly federal building ever erected outside the District of Columbia. Only the commerce building, now nearing completion, which will cost $17,000,000 tops the Chicago structure in price. The latter will contain floor space covering a total of practically fifty acres.

Dimensions of Structure.

The huge structure, which will extend from the car tracks from Van Buren street to Harrison street on the west side of Canal street, will be entirely of unfinished Bedford Indiana limestone. The present large Van Buren street postoffice will be remodeled architecturally into the Dearborn street postoffice unit. The building will be 200 feet high, have nine stories in the rear and twelve office stories on the Van Buren street front, with towers.

To give an idea of the magnitude of the job it is shown that the building will require 50,000 tons of steel and 50,000 tons of stone will be utilized in its construction. In addition large quantities of gravel and cement will be needed. It will house approximately 12,000 federal employes every working hours and about twenty-five thousand during the holiday rush. As shown in the specifications, ex-

Surging into Chicago from all directions, a talented army of choristers, musicians, drummers, buglers, soldiers and pyrotechnic artists arrived yesterday to participate tonight in the world's greatest outdoor concert—the second annual Chicagoland Music Festival in Soldiers' field.

They come from Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Illinois, as representatives of communities and districts whose newspapers coöperated with THE TRIBUNE in sponsoring the festival. Among the foremost individuals to arrive was John Philip Sousa, the march king, who will lead a united band of 2,200 musicians tonight in the playing of martial airs. Among the leading bands which arrived was that from Cedar Falls, Ia., first prize winner in last year's festival.

9,000 Will Take Part.

Yesterday's arrivals numbered hundreds. Other hundreds will arrive today. They will be part of the 9,000 choristers and musicians who will make tonight's event notable in the world of music. Even the weather man is coöperating to make the night memorable. Clear skies and warmer temperatures are predicted, nullifying precautionary plans for a postponement to tomorrow in case of bad weather.

This morning prize bands and drums and bugle corps will compete for honors preliminary to tonight's festival. This afternoon choral groups will contest for similar honors. Among them will be the Ukrainian choir, which won first position last night in the local division, and which will strive to hold that place against prize choirs from other cities in Chicagoland.

Many Help to Assure Success.

With the hour of the festival at hand everything was in readiness last night. This was made possible through the unstinted coöperation of the many music groups participating, of the south park board, the police department, James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and engineers, transportation and taxi companies, and others.

In addition, another form of cooperation was contributed by the World's Fair commission. Through Rufus Dawes its head, the commission tonight will for the first time illuminate its administration building near the Stadium. The illumination will give a fantastic, exotic glow to the structure, suggestive of a World's Fair night. This will be done in honor of the festival and will be well worth viewing.

Will Hear Chorus of 6,000.

The 150,000 men and women who are expected to pack Soldiers' field may expect to receive thrill after thrill as they listen to stirring military marches played by a mammoth band, and to famous oratorios sung by a chorus of 6,000.

The full effect of every tone, rich and original will be carried to every

Million Dollar Pearl Mystery at Link Bridge

A mystery that may achieve the distinction of being called the Hunt for the Million Dollar Pearls developed last evening when it became known that Mrs. Hugh Dillman of Detroit had dropped a string of jewels, quite by accident, into the Chicago river at the Michigan avenue bridge.

Mrs. Dillman is the widow of Horace Dodge, the founder of the automobile company bearing his name. The death of Mr. Dodge made her one of the world's richest women. Following her marriage to Hugh Dillman she gained added distinction as the purchaser of the triple rope of pearls from the crown jewels of the czars of Russia. The pearls are known as the necklace of the Empress Catherine II.

Pearls Drop in River.

Several days ago the Dillman yacht anchored in the Chicago harbor. Mrs. Dillman came ashore from the palatial craft in her tender and landed at the Michigan avenue bridge. She had with her a rope of pearls. Whether this was the famous Catherine necklace or a simpler one has not been reported.

By the most singular of chances the pearls slipped her grasp and dropped into the river. Now, the Catherine pearls have been appraised at $825,000. The largest in the strand is said to be worth $100,000. The smallest is said to have a value of $10,000. So if this is the necklace that reposes in the bed of the river it is well worth the efforts of a diver.

Yacht Waits in Harbor.

In fact, two days ago a diver was found making soundings at the Michigan avenue bridge. He was asked to explain his business at that point but he kept on diving and said nothing. For two days he has been scraping away at the mud and ooze. And it is not known if he has been successful.

But investigation among the police in the vicinity developed the information that Mrs. Dillman had dropped her pearls, that she had employed the diver and that the Dillman yacht still rides at anchor in the harbor awaiting the results of the diver's persistent visits to the bottom of the river.

There is only one more point to be made which may dismiss the possibility of the Catherine jewels. It is that when Mrs. Dillman bought the jewels she is said to have presented them to her daughter, Delphine, the wife of H. H. Cromwell of Philadelphia. So if there are jewels lost they may be another and less expensive string.

SERGT. M'SWIGGIN FATHER OF SLAIN "BILLY" IS DEAD

Sergt. Anthony McSwiggin, whose son, Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin, was assassinated by gangsters several years ago, died late last night at the Columbus Memorial hospital.

Dr. Daniel Orth, who attended him, notified the coroner's office. He said he believed that death resulted from a head injury suffered by the policeman July 26 when his automobile overturned at Joliet and Wolf roads.

Sergt. McSwiggin was 56 years old and was a member of the police department over thirty-seven years. He lived at 4946 West Washington boulevard. The killing of his son was a big tragedy in his life and for several years he sought the slayers personally. Surviving the sergeant are his widow, Elizabeth, and four daughters, Mrs. James Kelly, and Helen, Emily, and Margaret McSwiggin.

Lyndys Hop for Japan; Forced Down by Fog

BULLETIN.

NEMURO, Japan, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The communications department announced Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh had landed at Shana, Iturup island, at 4:58 p. m., Tokio time (2:58 Chicago daylight saving time), on their attempted flight from Muroton bay, in the Kurile islands, to Nemuro. Shana is half way between Muroton bay and Nemuro. A previous message said the Lindberghs were encountering another dense fog and had been advised to land in the bay near Shana.

NEMURO, Japan, Aug. 22 [Saturday].—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Muroton bay on Shimushiro island in the Kuriles at 2:10 p. m. Saturday [12:10 a. m. Chicago time] for a flight of about 400 miles to Nemuro.

The famous American flyer and his wife continued their vacation trip to the orient after being held in the Kurile islands since Wednesday, when fog forced them to land at Ketoi island during their flight from Petropavlovsk, Siberia, to Nemuro, Japan.

The tender Shimushiro Maru arrived Thursday alongside the monoplane and later towed it to Muroton bay, a landlocked harbor, for safety.

Trouble with the plane's motor developed and it was not until Col. Lindbergh had spent many hours working on it after he arose at 5:40 a. m. today that it was put in working order.

Detroit Flyers Unreported.

COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Edwin H. Preston and Robert H. Collignon of Detroit were out of touch with civilization today, presumably flying northward to extend the dead end sky trail of Parker D. Cramer. They took off here yesterday for Rupert House, Quebec, only 200 miles away, but unconnected with the outer world by either wire or rail. They had a radio, but their transmitter was weak and no report was received from them. They are flying from Detroit to Copenhagen.

DO-X Due in U. S. Today.

ANTILLA, Cuba, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The seaplane DO-X came down on Antilla bay at noon today, completing a flight from San Juan, Porto Rico. She is due at Miami tomorrow.

Youth Leaves His Bed and Is Killed by Train

Oscar Johnson, 20 years old, 7540 Parnell avenue, was killed early this morning when he was run over by a C. & E. I. freight train at 75th street and Emerald avenue. His father said the boy had gone to bed and he could not account for the youth being on the track.

Two Confess; End Mystery of Lake Killing

Following the confessions of a well-to-do contractor and a married woman who were the companions of the red haired woman found murdered near Silver Lake, Wis., early Thursday, police began a search for a man named Black as the slayer. The slain woman was identified yesterday through finger prints as Mrs. Anne Patterson, 32 years old, formerly a Chicagoan. With her husband, Frank [Blue] Patterson, another woman and three men she was arrested on Aug. 25 1926, near Twin Lakes, on burglary charges. The two women were released, but the men all were sentenced to from one to three years in the Wisconsin penitentiary.

Following the identification of the body Lieut. John L. Sullivan took into custody the contractor, who is married and the father of three children, and the woman who was his companion on a pleasure jaunt to the lakes near Antioch last Wednesday night. Their names were withheld by Lieut. Sullivan and Capt. Joseph Goldberg of the Albany Park station pending the arrest of Black.

Story of the Slaying.

According to the contractor he and his woman companion, with Black and Mrs. Patterson, went swimming in a lake near Antioch. All had been drinking, he said. After a time Black attempted to attack Mrs. Patterson, who resisted his advances and began beating him and screaming. To stop her screams, the contractor told the police, Black choked and beat the woman until she ceased to struggle. The contractor and his companion admitted they did nothing to aid Mrs. Patterson in her battle with Black.

In a short time it was found Mrs. Patterson was dead. Then began a discussion as to what to do with the body. Black urged that it be placed on a railroad track so that it would be supposed the woman had been killed by a train.

Body Tossed from Auto.

The contractor objected to this and it was then decided to take the body to some lonely spot and toss it out of the automobile in which the party had gone to the lake. After driving about for some time and not finding a suitable spot the body was thrown by the roadside near the intersection of Wisconsin route 50 and the Soo line tracks northwest of Silver Lake.

The contractor his woman friend and Black then returned to Chicago and to their homes. The contractor said he was introduced to Black only by his surname and could not tell his Christian name. He said the slayer lived somewhere on Grand avenue. When asked why he had not come forward to aid the police, he said he was afraid he would "get in a jam" and his family would learn of his escapade.

Capt. Goldberg and Lieut. Sullivan with several squads searched throughout the night for the slayer, but returned to the station empty-handed.

Dr. E. L. Miloslavich, Milwaukee pathologist, had given it is his opinion that Mrs. Patterson had been attacked and beaten as she emerged from a swim in a lake. His theory was confirmed by the contractor's confession.

Identified by Finger Prints.

The first determination of the identity of the victim was made by Robert Deschneau, fingerprint expert for the Kenosha police department. Coroner A. B. Schmitz, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Nick Otto and two detectives, came to Chicago to aid the Chicago police in their search for the slayer.

BANDITS BEAT ELDERLY WOMAN; SEIZE JEWELRY

Two brutal gunmen turned their guns last evening on an elderly woman, knocked her cane from her hand, and then pummeled her with their fists when she resisted robbery.

She is Mrs. Marie Sullivan, 5000 Drexel boulevard, said to be the widow of a western railroad builder Police say she is between 60 and 70 years old.

Mrs. Sullivan was walking home when, as she was in Drexel boulevard between 48th and 49th street, an automobile containing three men drew alongside her. Two of the occupants leaped out, guns drawn. They demanded her purse. "My son gave me that," she replied. "You may have what's in it, but not the purse." "Don't get tough, old lady "one of the bandits warned.

He grabbed for the purse, but Mrs. Sullivan resisted. He knocked away the cane which she carried to aid her walking and then struck her in the face, drawing blood. Mrs. Sullivan fell to the sidewalk, still holding the purse. One of the gunmen struck her elbow with his revolver, forcing her to release the purse. Then they escaped. Mrs. Sullivan said the purse contained $5,000 in jewelry.

TWO OFFICERS, THREE BANDITS AND CHILD SLAIN

13 Wounded in Long Street Battle.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Two policemen, a child, and three thugs were killed, and 13 persons, including three policemen and two firemen, were wounded in a 12 mile chase in the Bronx and upper Manhattan today following a holdup. The bandits had attempted to escape with a pay roll of $4,619 belonging to the Mendosa Fur and Dyeing works at 718 East 133d street.

The chase, in which dozens of policemen participated, ended in a battle in which two of the robbers were killed, another was fatally wounded, and the stolen money was recovered. More than 100 shots were exchanged in this one encounter.

There were more than a thousand shots fired as the pursued and pursuers went at top speed, weaving in and out of the traffic on some of New York's most crowded streets.

Child Shot in Head.

Most of the wounded were bystanders or persons in automobile. A three year old child was shot in the head as she sat beside her father in a machine which ran into the firing zone. She later died. Hundreds of other persons walking along the sidewalks or in motor cars were in danger during the pursuit.

The chase of the holdup car over the twelve mile route lasted an hour and a half. It began in the western part of the Bronx, where a patrolman was killed, and ended at Broadway and Dyckman street, where police pistols took the lives of the three robbers.

Streets Become Unsafe.

The battle was the latest in the war that has raged throughout New York between outlaws and police and between various factions of outlaws. Death and violence have made the streets unsafe in spite of extra police and special details. The public has become so aroused that many charge the gangsters, liquor racketeers, and kidnapers have the upper hand.

The final battle in which the bandits were killed was in front of 146 Dyckman street. Here the bandits were overtaken in a taxicab driven by William Nugent and occupied by Patrolman Albert Walker, Patrolman Albert Morrell and Detective William Kily. The two patrolmen and the detective, standing on the running board of Nugent's car and using the car as a barricade, shot it out with the thugs.

When the bodies of the gunmen were removed from their bullet riddled car a revolver, five automatic pistols and a quantity of cartridges containing "dum-dum" bullets were found on the floor.

Policeman Shot Down.

The bandits first waylaid and murdered Patrolman Walter J. Webb of the Bronx as he was about to get out of an automobile with Lloyd Fomhoff, manager of the dyeing works, before the offices of the plant.

More than 150 men and women were in the plant waiting for their pay as the automobile was driven into an alley next to the plant.

Before they had a chance to alight from the machine two men with pistols drawn moved into the alley and ordered them to hold up their hands. Webb threw open the door of the automobile and reached for his revolver One of the robbers made a target of Webb's shield, firing a bullet into his heart.

Dies on Way to Hospital.

Another shot fired by the second bandit went wild. With his hand clutching the holster of his revolver, Webb fell from the car. He died in an ambulance on the way to Lincoln hospital.

After murdering Webb the robbers seized the pay roll, forced the terror-stricken Fomhoff from the car and fled in it. At 149th street and St. Ann's avenue they abandoned the car and changed into the taxi driven by a confederate.

The bandits sped unhindered along St. Ann's avenue, ignoring traffic lights, to 161st street, where St. Ann's avenue merges with 3d avenue. As they turned up Boston road and reached 169th street they were spotted by Motorcycle Policeman Edward Churchill. From his seat Churchill fired on the gunmen's car.

He was met by the bandits with a hail of bullets. Wounded in the abdomen and in the legs, Churchill was rushed to the Bronx hospital, where he died after two blood transfusions.

At this point Vincent Hyde, a fireman, rushed up to Churchill, picked up his revolver, and took up the fight. Struck by a bullet in the chest, Hyde was rushed to the Jewish Memorial hospital in a critical condition.

Hyde, who is a former policeman was driving with his family when the car of the Bronx holdup men sped past followed by the pursuers.

"I heard shooting, and then a car sped by followed by others," he said. "A motorcycle policeman—somebody said his name was Churchill—drew alongside me. He wasn't ten feet away when I heard him say, 'I got it.'

"His machine went wild and he fell in the roadway. I jammed on the brakes and drew into the curb, hopped out, and grabbed his gun. There was a taxi passing. I got onto the running board and told him to drive like mad. I kept firing, but they winged me and I fell into the street."

He handed the motorcycle patrolman's weapon over to a police inspector, saying "I just wanted you to know how I came to be in possession of it," and lost consciousness.

The occupants of the bandit car increased their fire as they proceeded up Boston road. The men—later identified as John Brecht, 25; Herbert Haase, 27, and Martin Bachorik, 19—continued to fire steadily as the car sped up Boston road, gaining speed as it neared 172d street.

Lawyer Is Wounded.

At that point Thomas P. Cullen, an attorney, was wounded in the shoulder by a bullet that shattered the windshield of his automobile. Cullen was in his office when he heard the firing, grabbed a revolver and hurriedly got into his automobile and joined in the chase.

The bandits swung south and west toward the Harlem river and upper Manhattan. Three persons were shot just before they reached the river. Three other persons were struck at this point. They were Vincent Lopez, a fireman, his wife, Matilda Lopez, and their daughter, Gloria, 3 years old. The family came along in their automobile as pursuers were shooting it out with the thugs.

The father and mother suffered slight injuries, but the child, wounded in the left ear, head, and neck, died.

Tells of Wild Chase.

As the thugs left Boston road, their pursuit was taken up by three officers in a commandeered taxicab. The driver, William Nugent, gave a graphic and coherent account of the remainder of the chase.

Nugent said he had just turned into Webster avenue from 167th street when he saw the bandit car.

"A fellow was standing in the middle of the street with his coat off, pegging a couple of shots after them," he said.

The driver followed the bandit cab to 161st street and then to Jerome avenue.

"They were pumping left and right," Nugent said, "and the man with his coat off turned out to be Detective William Kily. He jumped on my running board and gave it back to them."

At 161st street and Jerome avenue a traffic officer got into Nugent's cab. With the traffic officer and Detective Kiley in his machine Nugent drove to McComb bridge, over the Harlem river, at 155th street.

"I pulled on to the wrong side of the bridge," Nugent said. "All the way across I kept weaving through traffic on the wrong side. The boys kept pumping away all the time."

After Nugent's car crossed the bridge he drove to Edgecomb avenue.

The bandit car then turned down 158th street towards Broadway and Riverside drive with Nugent's car still in pursuit.

Shoot at Wrong Cab.

"There's a long hill there," Nugent pointed out, "clean down to the drive. Kily, still on the running board, stuck his head in my window and said, 'We'll get 'em now. We'll get 'em down the hill.' So I pushed my foot down to the floor board and stayed on the wrong side of the street. At Broadway the lights were against us. The bandits managed to get through the traffic somehow. About that time a police patrol car came alongside me and started to shoot at my cab. They thought I was driving the bandits.

"Kily yelled to 'em, 'Don't shoot!' And then they saw I had a cop in the car and they didn't shoot. We kept right on across Broadway against the lights and I pushed it down to the floor board again all the way down to the drive. We must have been doing 60 miles an hour through all that traffic.

Bullet Passes Under Arm.

"I stayed right behind them all the way to Dyckman street. I kept weaving from one side of the street to the other, dodging bullets. Once a bullet came through the cowling and went between my arm and my body, just a little bit on the left side. It buried itself in the seat behind me. Another one came through on the other side of me and also was buried in the seat.

"Every time Kily and the other cop shot out their rounds I'd slow down to give 'em a chance to reload. I knew that if we ran right up on the guys then they'd plug us all and there wouldn't be any stopping them." On the way Nugent's cab had two tires shot flat by the gunmen's bullets, but they kept to the chase. As they were approaching Dyckman street, Kily put a bullet into the gasoline tank of the fleeing taxicab.

Gas Tank Catches Fire.

"There was a woman and a baby right in the way as we turned into Dyckman street," Nugent said. "I thought we had her for a minute, but she saw me coming and jumped and I went right between two traffic stands. Kily still stayed on the running board. Then the cab in front began to show smoke from its gas tank, which had caught fire.

"The gunmen's cab hit a fruit truck, but not very hard, and stopped. The bandits got down on the floor, kept pumping out of the cab, right through the doors."

"Kily had thrown open the door of the bandit cab and was pumping it in right on 'em," Nugent went on. "I got out of my cab and on the tail of the fruit truck I saw a hammer.

Hits Him with Hammer.

"I picked it up and went up towards the driver of the bandit cab, on the other side of him. He had a revolver in his hand. As he tried to step out I hit him with the hammer. And then I threw the hammer down on the running board."

Nugent said that while he was attacking the driver of the taxicab the traffic policeman, who had accompanied him and Kily and whose name Nugent never learned, leaped to the opposite side of the taxicab, opened the door and blazed away at the two men inside. Meanwhile, one of the small army of policemen who had reached the scene by this time ran up to the driver of the bandits' machine and fired four bullets into his body.

ROUTE OF THE CHASE

The length of the chase, according to police officials who pieced the story together late tonight, actually was from twelve to fifteen miles. As recounted by Deputy Police Commissioner Felix A. Muldoon, Chief Inspector John O'Brien, and Deputy Chief Inspector John J. Hennessy, the chase was as follows:

Immediately after the holdup at 712 East 133d street the bandits stole the automobile belonging to the manager of the company, drove west on 133d street to St. Ann's avenue, north on St. Ann's avenue to 149th street, where they abandoned the private automobile and took possession of a Yellow taxicab.

Leave Their Taxicab.

Then they drove to Westchester avenue, north on Westchester avenue to the Jackson avenue subway station, which is elevated at that point. For some reason unknown to the police the men jumped out of the taxicab, ran up to the subway station, leaving the stolen money in the taxicab.

A moment afterward they returned, jumped into the taxicab, drove west to Third avenue, north on Third avenue to 163d street, where they passed Patrolman Churchill conversing with Traffic Policeman Edward Worrell. As the taxicab sped by, a civilian, Charles Fackler, the Bronx, drove up in his car and told Churchill and Worrell that there were three armed men in the taxicab.

Churchill jumped on his motorcycle while Worrell climbed on the running board of Fackler's car and also joined in the chase.

The taxicab sped north to the junction of 163d street, Third avenue and Boston road, then went north on Boston road to McKinley square, where Churchill was shot at the corner of 169th street, toppling to the ground in sight of Worrell. The taxicab then went west on 169th street, south of 168th street, west of 168th street to Webster avenue, south of Webster avenue to the junction of Park avenue.

Officer Commandeers Cab.

Then the gunmen went south along Park avenue to 161st street, west to River avenue, over the McComb's bridge across the Harlem river to 155th street. The gunmen shot bullets into the tires of Fackler's car, which was still in pursuit. Morrell commandeered a passing taxicab and continued the chase.

The taxicab proceeded along 155th street to St. Nicholas avenue, went north on St. Nicholas avenue to 160th street, west to Riverside drive, north to Dyckman street, east on Dyckman street to Sherman avenue, south on Sherman avenue to 192d street, across to Broadway and north on Broadway to Dyckman street where the chase ended.

LATEST OF MANY CRIMES

The outbreak served to put a new emphasis on one of the biggest weeks of violent crime that New York has known in many a hectic moon. Scarcely an edition of any newspaper has come out without a story of some new gang battle or brutal murder.

The week's record started with a gangster battle in a Brooklyn speakeasy in which three men were literally beaten to death in a gang battle supposed to be a sequel to a raid recently made on the place by a member of the "mob" of Angelo ["Little Augie"] Pisano, reputed successor to Frankie Yale, Brooklyn crime overlord.

Before the hands of the clock had made their round again the mutilated body of a "ride" victim was found wrapped in an oilcloth lying in a gutter in the outskirts of Brooklyn.

The night of the following day brought a pitched gang battle on the lower east side in which two men were shot to death and the district paralyzed by a reign of terror kept up by the pursuit of fleeing gangsters by their rivals during the next hour or so.

Real Estate Agent Slain.

A Harlem Negro real estate agent was found shot to death in the back yard premises of a tenement house he owned a little later, and then came a holdup on Fifth avenue in which a bandit was shot to death in a duel with a policeman following the robbery of a hat store.

Singularly enough, this unusual display of violence came as a sequel to a series of theatrical measures inaugurated by the police for dealing with the crime wave—measures prompted by a popular outcry against the growing depredations of gangdom in this, the largest city of the country.

With each step of the police "defensive" campaign, however, the cohorts of gangland—now estimated by the police to number 150,000 or more—have been growing bolder and bolder and more and more reckless of the lives and properties of law abiding New Yorkers.

PROFESSOR NETS HIS BUGS O.K., BUT THIEF GETS THEM

Six weeks ago Prof. John S. Dolley of the University of Illinois and his wife left Urbana on a scientific quest. They drove through several states, undergoing occasional discomfiture in their wanderings.

Prof. Dolley is an entomologist. His scientific quest was to find rare insects, larvae, and other evidences of the insect world. The tour was highly profitable. With the aid of professional equipment, including tubes and similar paraphernalia, the professor obtained probably 1,000 specimens of ants, bees, dragon flies, earwigs, spiders and other insects.

All these the professor carefully indexed in a card file, a task which required considerable study, and more effort than the mere catching or trapping of the specimens.

Last night Prof. Dolley and his wife arrived in Chicago. They parked their car, containing the insects and index, at 11th street and Michigan avenue. The absented themselves for a few hours. When they returned the suitcase containing the 1,000 insects and index, the results of six weeks' work, was gone. It had been stolen.

YOUNG VIOLINIST AND "MODEL SON" TURNS ROBBER

A young violin virtuoso, known as a model boy, was arrested last night at his home as a robber. He is Eugene Halvorsen, 17 years old, of 3016 Edegwood avenue.

Two days ago Halvorsen entered the De Prato music shop, 218 South Wabash avenue. He tied and gagged the owner, Thomas Parker, a clerk, and Charles Newberger, a patron, and fled with $7.50 and a case of violin bows valued at $500. He threw away the bows outside the store. In his flight he dropped a letter bearing his name and address.

Last night Detectives John Geary and Peter Murphy called at Halvorsen's home. A few minutes later Halvorsen appeared and was seized. He confessed the robbery but said he had no reason to turn to crime. His family declared that the boy was a student, a home boy, and considered an exceptionally gifted violinist. He teaches a violin class, studies at a conservatory, and belongs to three music clubs, the family said.

NEEDY FAMILIES GET FIRST LOAD OF CROP SURPLUS

Truckload of Apples for Jobless Is Received.

Four hundred and eighty Chicago families yesterday received apples, fresh from farmers' orchards near Benton Harbor, in the first division of surplus crops among the poor under a plan devised by the Rev. Johnston Myers of the Immanuel Baptist church, 2320 South Michigan avenue.

The fruit distributed was obtained when a truck manned by two unemployed men returned from the Michigan orchards with 60 bushels of apples and with the request of the farmers that the truck be sent back with other machines for as many loads as could be handled.

A special meeting of the Benton Harbor city council was called to discuss the pastor's plan and an invitation to gather fruit resulted.

Farmers Pick Apples.

Although it had been expected that some small recompense might be expected by the farmers for their fruit, Dr. Myers was able to obtain this first load at no cost except for fuel for the truck and meals for the drivers, as the farmers not only picked the apples but helped to load the truck.

According to Dr. Myers, there is only one problem facing his plan to feed thousands on the surplus fruits and vegetables of the farms. This problem is to find a way to finance the operation of the trucks and the feeding of the workers while they are away from home.

"Another truck will leave Monday to return late Monday night or early Tuesday morning from Michigan with more fruit," said Dr. Myers yesterday. "This will be distributed on the west side among Negroes, while the truck expected to follow that will be unloaded and fruit or vegetables parceled out on the south side."

Plans to Boil Wheat.

One of Dr. Myers' plans, to be tried this week, is the boiling of twenty-five bushels of wheat for distribution in banks after it had partially dried. One of the first offers made to Dr. Myers was of 100 bushels of wheat and 100 bushels of rye. No attempt will be made to have the wheat ground into flour, but it is to be cooked and eaten with a little salt, sugar and milk.

After potatoes and other vegetables reach maturity this fall it is expected that many families will receive sufficient supplies of the free or low cost field crops to tide them through part of the winter. Farmers of Cook county already have invited the pastor to broach some plan of participating in the harvest of vegetables.

Mayor Plans Special Stores.

While the pastor's plans were being carried out yesterday, Mayor Cermak was considering a project of opening emergency stores for the sale of surplus bread and milk among the unemployed, restricting the sales to those listed as needy by various charitable organizations. This new plan came as a suggestion from a farmer in Wisconsin, who found surplus whole milk and bread more than a day old and no longer considered fresh so cheap in price that he was feeding his hogs on bread and milk.

"Tons of bread only a day old are taken back by bakers and sold to be used for animal feed," said Mayor Cermak. "This could be used to feed the hungry, and with the bread also the milk for which some farmers are only offered $1 a can.

Could Meet Health Laws.

"Farmers are now feeding this milk to hogs and other animals rather than sell it at 1¼ cents a quart. In addition tons of bread only a day old are being used for zoo feed, and in some cases it is even being burned."

It was recognized by both the mayor and by Health Commissioner Bundesen that two obstacles first would have to be met. They are contained in a city ordinance which prohibits the sale of milk in bulk and which requires pasteurization. The mayor suggested putting to use some of the several idle pasteurization plants, although probably this surplus milk will not be sold in bottles.

BOOM TRAYLOR FOR PRESIDENT IN TEXAS RALLY

Ballinger, Tex., Aug. 21.—(AP)—More than 1,500 west Texans came here tonight to hear business associates of Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker, name him as the American best qualified to become President of the United States.

Admirers came from distant west Texas points to hear Traylor's "home folks" praise him as the man of the hour. Traylor was once in the banking business here.

Judge B. B. Stone of Fort Worth was the principal speaker. He said Traylor knew the value of cotton, the problems of the cotton farmer, live stock problems, what wool and mohair was worth, and possessed the judgment to decide and the courage to act.

RESTAURANT STAFFS PLAN TO GIVE FIRST MONEY FOR RELIEF

Employés of Pixley & Ehlers' restaurants plan to make the first cash donation to the joint emergency relief organization, formed to raise $8,800,000 for the care of the unemployed and destitute of Cook county this winter.

These employés of the thirteen restaurants have agreed to pay 50 cents each as admission to a picnic to be held tomorrow at House of Niles Picnic grove. All of the proceeds will be given to the relief organization. About 2,000 persons are expected at the gathering, according to A. J. Pixley, president of the restaurant organization.

Mayor Cermak yesterday suggested that cheap milk and day old bread can be obtained in large quantities for the unemployed.

"Whatever is done along this line will be in conjunction with the emergency relief organization," said the mayor. "I was in Wisconsin last week and was told that the farmers are getting so little for their milk that they are feeding it to their hogs. Bakeries take back from groceries day old bread and many families would be glad to get that bread."

FINDS PUBLIC HEALTH KEEPS UP DESPITE SLUMP

Hoover Sees Gifford at Rapidan Today.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Measured by the test of public health the country has stood up well beneath the burden of the depression and unemployment, President Hoover declared today in discussing the administration's plans to meet next winter's unemployment problem.

GEN. HUGH S. CUMMINGS. [H. & E. Photo.]

The President presented statistics submitted at his request by Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the public health service, showing that the general mortality rate, the infant mortality rate, and the rate for certain diseases were, on the whole, lower during the first half of 1931 than in the previous two years.

In relief work, President Hoover said, one of the most accurate tests of success or failure was to be found in the reflex on public health.

In proof of the employment furnished by government construction President Hoover stated that 180,000 workers had been directly or indirectly employed on government jobs at the beginning of the depression and that this figure had increased to 730,000 on Aug. 1. The decrease in employment in road building, he said, would be balanced to a considerable degree by the 80,000 to 100,000 who would be at work on new government construction jobs by next January.

So far the President has received acceptances from 52 of the 60 professional, business, industrial, and financial leaders whom he asked to serve as an advisory committee to the President's unemployment relief organization. Two of those asked were forced to decline because of illness; six are absent on vacation. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, who will head the relief work, will accompany the President to the Rapidan camp tomorrow.

$20,000,000 for Needy Plan of New York City

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee today called a special meeting of the board of estimate for Monday to vote on an appropriation of $20,000,000 for the relief of the unemployed.

If the appropriation is passed the board of estimate will ask the state legislature at its special session next Tuesday to exempt the $20,000,000 from the city's debt limit.

PREDICTS TRADE PENDULUM SOON TO SWING BACK

Lord Beaverbrook Urges U. S. to Lead.

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—A challenge to America to lead the world out of the slough of economic depression was sounded today by Lord Beaverbrook, London newspaper publisher.

LORD BEAVERBROOK. [A. P. Photo.]

The short, gray haired power in British politics and industry, who started life with nothing and temporarily retired at the age of 28 with a fortune of $7,000,000, was aglow with optimism, however, as he stepped from the liner that had brought him from Halifax.

He said he was certain the world would soon experience a great swing of the pendulum, which would bring back widespread prosperity. How soon, he intimated, would depend upon America.

"This is not the greatest depression in history," he said, "and it's not even the worst your country has experienced. Don't forget Coxey's army and the 'hungry nineties.'

Waiting for America.

"In England and the rest of Europe we are waiting for America to lead the way back to normal times. America owes it to us. From New York alone 600 million dollars in short time money has been loaned to Germany. Now the United States should take the leadership that goes with that responsibility.

"You should heed the Biblical phrase, 'Where your treasures are, there let your heart be also.'"

The British publisher, who was born in Canada and made his fortune there, at this point became for the first time the dynamic personality his friends and foes abroad picture him.

He wanted it clearly understood he was not referring to the league of nations, "that branch of the French foreign office." Nothing too strong could be said about the league, he explained. It was worse than worthless and he admired America for staying out of it.

Says Russia Will Fail.

As to Russia he said:

"I have been to Russia and studied her. She will be the next country to fail. Any one is a fool to lend her money to postpone that inevitable climax."

He was not in the least worried about the future of England, he said. If worst came to worst, the government could force its nationals to bring back home some of the 4 billion dollars they have invested in other lands.

"This would be a radical departure from policy, but it could be done if necessary," he added.

Lord Beaverbrook said he was going to stay in New York "as long as I can, for it's my old stamping ground and I love it." He is accompanied by his brother, Allan Aitken, and Lord Castlerosse, a journalist.

The congress was organized by the International Industrial Relations Association of New York and it will last until Aug. 29. Million Flee as Flood Threatens to Wipe Out City

HANKOW, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Death, starvation, and pestilence stalked through over widening areas of China today as flood waters that have swept thousands to death and made upward of 20,000,000 homeless swirled on in what may be the greatest calamity of modern times.

Destruction of this great inland city of modern China was threatened by the rising Yangtze river and a general exodus of its population of close to a million was in progress.

Several hundred miles to the north the Hwai Ho river was spreading out over thousands of square miles in northern Honan, Anhwei, and Kiangsu provinces. Eighty counties were reported inundated, lowland villages and crops were destroyed. No estimate of the loss of life was available from the north.

Float in Coffins.

The Hankow area, including the sister cities of Wuchang and Hanyang, was engulfed and the seriousness of the situation was augmented by the constant stream of refugees pouring in from other inundated sections. On rafts made of house doors or other materials, in long treasured family coffins and in sampans, the fleeing natives arrived. Some owed their lives to the use of crude life preservers made of goatskins inflated with air.

Great dykes about Hankow and Wuchang, that had held back the roaring Yangtze from the low lying valley, burst and the unleashed river swept additional hundreds to their deaths. There were no reliable estimates of the dead here.

Unprecedented rains that overflowed the river systems caused the calamity. The Yangtze flows through a valley hundreds of miles long that is densely populated because of its fertile soil. The country is virtually flat and the flood waters thus spread out over a wide region.

Plead to Be Killed.

Heart rending scenes were witnessed by a correspondent as he went about the Hankow area in a sampan. Natives committed suicide to escape the flood, despite their repugnance to the act.

The inundation in northern China had turned the countryside into a lake that stretched to the horizon. Hundreds of thousands of acres of crops were under water, with the tops of tall trees or the thatch roofs of native villages thrusting through here and there.

At Nanking the National government council decided upon a bond issue of $10,000,000 Mexican (about $3,000,000) as an immediate relief measure. Meanwhile the government was negotiating with the federal farm board of the United States for the purchase of surplus wheat on long term credits. The grain would be used for relief of the starving.

U. S. WHEAT IS SWAPPED FOR BRAZIL COFFEE

Farm Board Revives Old Barter.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The United States government, in an effort to aid the farmer, has turned to the almost forgotten system of commerce by "barter."

The federal farm board has traded 25 million bushels of wheat held by the Grain Stabilization corporation to the Brazilian government for 1,050,000 bags of coffee. The announcement, which came as the climax to six months of secret negotiations, was made today by Chairman James C. Stone of the farm board.

The board profits to this extent, however, that it saves the $375,000 a month it has been paying out for the storage of the 25 million bushels of wheat, and according to the terms of the contract will pay no storage charges on the coffee until October, 1932. These are to be paid by the Brazilian government.

By the terms of the deal the corporation will have on its hands, in addition to the estimated 200,000,000 bushels of wheat which will be left, the 132,000,000 pounds of coffee which it agrees it will not sell until the fall of 1932, and then cumulative allotments not to exceed 62,500 bags a month.

Brazil to Pay Freight.

The wheat will be shipped in monthly installments beginning in September. The coffee is to be received, delivered at New York; the wheat is to be sold f. o. b. at the American seaboard terminals. Brazil, therefore, pays the freight on both commodities. The trade is based on current prices and the offset is dollar for dollar.

Details as to the basis on which the exchange was made were not announced, but No. 1 hard winter wheat at New Orleans yesterday was quoted at about 50 cents per bushel, making the total value of the grain $12,500,000. The coffee based on the price prevailing for No. 7 Santos in New York was worth around $10,660,000, so the Brazilian government must pay for the terminal charges when the product arrives at New York.

A New York man, not in the coffee business, had first suggested the trade, it was said, but he refused to disclose the man's name.

By holding the coffee and then letting it out in monthly amounts through established channels, Mr. Stone said, the board believed its entry into the wholesale trade in this new and foreign commodity would not hurt the coffee market. In 1929 the United States imported 956 million pounds of coffee from Brazil. The coffee received by the board, therefore, represents about 14 per cent of a year's importations.

Breaks Into Rival Market.

One feature that recommended the deal to the board is the chance it offers to break into a market formerly held by Argentina. Of Brazil's annual importation of wheat, which runs about 35,000,000 bushels, the United States has heretofore contributed only about one-fifth. The short Argentine wheat crop this year opened the door.

The trade represents not only the important opportunity the board had to send a portion of its wheat holdings out of the country, but it also marks the meeting of two gigantic attempts to stabilize a major commodity. The failure of the Brazilian coffee stabilization scheme, begun in 1927, has been frequently held up before the board and members of congress who passed the agricultural marketing act as an example of the impossibility of trying to peg prices.

Growers seized upon the Brazilian program for the "defense" of coffee and the first high prices which resulted from it to increase their production until, by last November, twice the amount of Brazilian annual coffee needs had been piled up as a surplus. Large amounts were dumped in the sea or burned.

Drawing the parallel, critics of the board point to the stabilization efforts in wheat and cotton and then to this year's increase in the production of both commodities.

Ask State Laws on Cotton.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 21.—(AP)—State legislatures of the south were called upon today by the New Orleans cotton conference to pass acts to prevent planting of cotton in 1932.

The conference also adopted a proposal of United States Senator Thaddeus Caraway [Ark.] that the federal farm board purchase 8,000,000 bales of cotton at a price above the present market to be allocated to those farmers who agree not to plant any cotton next year, and to be sold at the farmers' orders and for their benefit.

LICENSING OF CAFES BY CITY IS UPHELD IN A TEST CASE

Municipal Judge Jay A. Schiller rendered a decision in a test case yesterday which, if sustained by the higher courts, will enable the city to collect hundreds of thousands of dollars in additional revenue by licensing restaurants.

JUDGE SCHILLER.

For ten years restaurants have avoided payment of license fees under a Supreme court decision which held that the city had no power to license them because the legislature omitted restaurants from the list of enterprises which might be licensed by cities and villages. On July 1 the city council passed a new licensing ordinance which, Assistant Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein asserted in a brief filed in the test case, got around the court decision by licensing the handling of food instead of the occupation of restaurant keeping.

Maurice's restaurant, 175 West Madison street, was fined $25 for violation of the ordinance in the test case. Attorneys for the restaurant took an appeal.

6 BANDITS FLEE AS PANIC HITS 800 AT MEETING

Six bandits last night invaded a meeting of 800 men and women of the Sons of Liberty, Polish National Alliance, at 1042 North Damen avenue.

"This is a holdup!" shouted the leader as he and his confederates waved their guns to cover the entire gathering. As he spoke he faced the rostrum at which sat Anton Guzik, the president, Joseph Zajdel, 3722 Cornelia avenue, the treasurer, and other officials. On the desk in front of him Zajel had $1,300.

At the announcement of the robbery dozens of men sprung from their seats as if to attack the robbers. The movement unnerved the bandits. The leader leveled his shotgun, and pressed the trigger. A blast of buckshot tore over Zajdel's head and shattered a window. Then, while the 800 men and women scattered helter skelter for shelter, the frustrated bandits fled out the door, minus the $1,300 which they had come to steal.

BOARD TO DECIDE TERMS OF PEACE IN THEATER WAR

Accept Arbitration; Action Due in Seven Days.

Temporarily at peace, both sides in the movie operators-theater owners controversy rested on their arms last night and gave thought to the demands they will make to a joint arbitration board which next week will attempt to compose their differences.

Each group will have two representatives on the board and the four will select the fifth member whose importance looms with the realization that he will be the actual arbiter—casting the deciding vote. The operators were prompt to name their union president, Thomas J. Reynolds, and Business Agent Tom Maloy to speak for them, but the owners were slower.

Swanson Aids Peace Efforts.

It had been intended to reopen the 100 closed theaters—darkened because they could not pay two operators, the owners claimed—last night, and even when State's Attorney Swanson succeeded in having a truce declared yesterday, a score or more of the owners were inclined to open their houses notwithstanding. They wished to use some of a group of 100 nonunion operators transported by plane from New York.

Aaron Saperstein, president of the Allied Theater Owners of Illinois, called his members together at the Auditorium hotel late in the afternoon and hours elapsed before the meeting adjourned with all harmonious.

A determined resistance developed to the conciliation scheme, and this was said to be whetted by a report that 16 of the New York operators had been kidnaped from a train at Gary yesterday. They were on their way from New York, and the rumors at the meeting were that three men who boarded the train in New Jersey and four more who joined it south of Gary had moved the entire 16 from the train when it came to the station stop. The nonunion operators are believed to have been told to stay away from Chicago.

Board's Decision to Be Final.

Long arguments reduced the opposition, and it was finally agreed that the executive committee—Saperstein, Fred Gilford, Verne Langdon, Nate Wolf, and Joseph Pastor—would select the representatives of the owners at a meeting this morning.

The board, which is to report in seven days, will concern itself with the ability of the theaters to pay two men, the cost of operation, and the necessity of having more than one man in each projection booth. At the close of his conference Mr. Swanson announced that each side had agreed to be bound by the findings of the board. Theodore Levin, attorney for the owners, and Thomas D. Nash, for the operators, will draw the arbitration agreement this morning.

After the morning meeting a rumor was circulated that one of the points in the arbitration involved possible leniency for Maloy who is under indictment for conspiracy in connection with his conduct of the union affairs. This could not be verified. Mr. Swanson, under whose direction the grand jury heard the testimony against Maloy, resulting in the latter's indictment, has been active in the movement for reconciling the theaters' and operators' differences.

First Break Appears.

The first break in the standpat attitude of both sides came at the night conference on Thursday which was presided over by Assistant State's Attorneys C. E. Lounsbury and Charles Bellows, the prosecutors who presented the conspiracy case against Maloy to the grand jury. Maloy, before entering that conference, had declared he would not confer "with the guy [Bellows] who got me indicted." But when the representatives of the owners arrived Maloy entered the parley in Swanson's office.

Joe Maloy is named with his brother and three other union officials in the indictment charging conspiracy to restrain trade and using racketeering methods in the conduct of the union.

"We do not expect this matter to be settled in seven days," said Mr. Swanson, "but we believe the main points will be ironed out so that both factions may operate peacefully until Jan. 10, when a new contract will be drawn between operators and owners.

It is considered possible that the board will recommend a cut in operators' salaries but will stand for the employment of two men.

File Joe Maloy Charges.

Joe Maloy, brother of the business agent, was charged with six counts of "conduct unbecoming a city employe," by City Gas Commissioner Jackson yesterday, the result of the former's suspension as examiner of motion picture operators licenses in the city department of gas and electricity.

The charges were: failing to secure proper evidence as to the qualifications of the applicant; failing to verify statements of the applicant as to his apprenticeship; failing to mark examination papers in some instances, giving no examinations in many instances, at the instigation of certain influential persons; permitting persons other than applicants to take the examinations for them, and answering questions for the applicant in some cases. After Maloy receives service on the formal charge, five days must elapse before his trial before the civil service commission.

Arrangements have been made for them to receive hourly bulletins of the condition of their son.

Ask Indictment Under New Law on Reckless Driving

Evanston police announced last night that they would seek to have Vincent Masters, 20 years old, 1811 Wesley avenue, Evanston, prosecuted for reckless driving under the new state law which provides that offenders whose carelessness results in accidents may be indicted and tried in the Criminal court. The maximum penalty under the statute is a $1,000 fine and a year in jail. It is alleged that Masters drove his car into a truck driven by Andrew Dromund, 32 years old, 841 North Kostner avenue, who was injured, last Friday, at Ashbury avenue and Davis street.

SWANSON ORDERS COUNTY INQUIRY ON CLOSED BANKS

Plans to Call Officers of 64 Institutions.

State's Attorney Swanson announced yesterday that his office will undertake a comprehensive grand jury investigation of every state bank closed in Cook county within the last two years. The probe will begin on Monday.

OSCAR NELSON. [Gibson Photo.]

Within the period designated 64 state banks in Cook county have been closed. Fourteen of these have come under the scrutiny of the state's attorney's office, the action resulting in the indictment of fifty bank officers, directors and employés.

As outlined by Mr. Swanson, the investigation may develop into the most thorough study of Chicago banking practice ever undertaken in Illinois. It is predicted that months will be required to complete it.

Will Call Bank Officers.

Bank officers and directors will be summoned to justify their managements of the closed institutions. Spokesmen for depositors' and bondholders' protective committees will be given an opportunity to air their grievances.

Bank receivers, their lawyers, state bank examiners and, possibly, State Auditor Oscar Nelson, whose appointees they are, will be called in to explain their views as to the conditions behind the closing of the threescore banks.

The investigation, Mr. Swanson said, will perforce include the twelve Bain banks, whose receiver, Irwin T. Gilruth, revealed that the chain closed with $2,000,000 owed to them by John Bain, his sons and the companies he dominated.

Meets with Grand Jurors.

Mr. Swanson reached his decision on the investigation late in the afternoon following a half hour conference with the grand jury. His assistant, Henry E. Ayers, bank specialist of the state's attorney's staff, was present.

"At a conference with the grand jury we decided that beginning Monday afternoon a thorough investigation will be made of all banks closed," the state's attorney announced. "We plan to summon bank receivers first, with a view to determining whether there have been any criminal violations of the banking laws.

"We also intend to call in any other persons who may have evidence of wrongdoing. The investigation will, of course, include the Bain banks."

At a meeting last night of the united depositors' committee, claiming to represent depositors of 32 banks, a plan was submitted for the organization of an "Inter-Bank Collateral Trust," a plan resembling in many aspects the pool of frozen bank assets proposed a week ago by State Auditor Nelson.

Meanwhile a legal battle was threatened over disposition of $900,000 in tax collections, taken in by ten of the Bain banks, prior to their closing, as agents for County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough.

While Mr. McDonough's attorney, Thomas D. Nash, announced that he would insist upon listing of the tax moneys as trust funds, subject to preferred payment by the bank receiver, counsel for Receiver Gilruth declared the county treasurer was not entitled to such preferment.

In the view of Adrian L. Hoover of the receiver's legal counsel, Mr. McDonough can, at most, only claim payment of the $900,000 as a "secondary preferred creditor," obliging him to await payment until all trust funds of the Bain banks have been settled.

Attorney Nash went before Superior Judge Ross C. Hall, planning to take steps to safeguard the county funds, but the court continued the matter to Sept. 9.

A question was raised whether Mr. McDonough's $5,000,000 bond as county treasurer covered the $900,000 in tax collections, an item distinct from the time deposits. It was pointed out that in designating the Bain institutions to collect taxes, McDonough was acting, not as county treasurer, but as county collector. Mr. Nash declined to give an opinion on the matter, saying he would consult his records and clear up the question today.

MAYOR WALKER TELLS BREWERS U. S. NEEDS PILSEN'S BEST BEER

PILSEN, Czecho-Slovakia, Aug. 21.—(AP)—An American flag flew over the historic Pilsen brewery in honor of Jimmy Walker this afternoon and New York's oberbuergermeister told the assembled city fathers at the ancient city hall that he had no dearer wish for his native city than to see Pilsener signs reappear in its places of conviviality.

Long before the Walker party arrived the streets were lined with natives wanting to see the mayor. Especially before the city hall, where Mr. Walker was escorted by traffic cops in resplendent uniforms, there was a huge throng cheering him loudly.

After almost two hours in Pilsen the Walker party motored to Prague, where they arrived late this evening.

$100,000 ASKED AS RANSOM FOR GOTHAM BROKER

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Police of New York City and Nassau county today broadcast an alarm for Charles M. Rosenthal of Lawrence, L. I., youthful member of a New York Curb exchange firm, who has been missing for ten days and is said by the Nassau authorities to be held for $100,000 ransom.

Police Asked to Aid.

Rosenthal, who, police say, is 25 years old, is a partner with his brother-in-law, Henry D. Bogatin, in the brokerage firm of Bogatin & Rosenthal, 25 Broadway.

According to the report of the Nassau police, the manner of his disappearance has not been determined, but Rosenthal was last seen on Aug. 11. Soon after he dropped from sight his family received a letter demanding $100,000 for Rosenthal's safe return.

Rosenthal and his family are worth several million dollars, mostly in real estate, it was said today in Lawrence. His father is dead. His mother is Mrs. Nellie K. Rosenthal.

Hear on Second Day.

According to the Nassau county police, the first communication with the supposed kidnapers of the young broker was on Aug. 12.

A telephone call was made to Edward Nathan, a friend of the young man. The anonymous caller said "Charlie" was "in trouble" and asked Mr. Nathan to "help."

"You'll get a letter," the caller said, and hung up.

Only a few minutes later a letter was delivered by a messenger, in which Rosenthal told of being kidnaped and held for a ransom of $100,000.

QUEBEC LIBERALS HARD PRESSED BY POLITICAL FOES

Conservatives Gain Power in Bitter Campaign.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

QUEBEC, Aug. 21.—The ancient fortress of Quebec is again under an assault from a determined enemy.

L. A. TASCHEREAU.
[Acme Photo.]

In the midst of the American tourist season, which is now in full swing, the Liberal government of Quebec province, which has been in power for 34 years, finds itself fighting for existence with a new Conservative group which is taking full advantage of the economic depression and is promising more of social relief than the Liberals have ever felt able to offer.

More is at stake at the elections next Monday than the personal fortunes of the contestants for legislative seats and premiership, for Quebec has always been regarded as the balance wheel of the dominion. The question now is whether it is to turn from its thrifty independence and sturdy individualism toward the glittering social schemes of the opposition, which savor much of socialism.

Campaign Is Bitter.

While the carefree tourists are clambering over the old walls built by the British to keep out the Americans, the Indians and the French, promenading on the Dufferin terrace above the St. Lawrence river and pouring money into the tills of the tavern keepers, the politicians are belaboring each other with a vigor not heard in years.

The chief figures in the campaign are Premier L. A. Taschereau, a thin, gray aristocrat, who looks something like Andrew Mellon and who has been in the saddle here for 15 years, and Camille Houde, the twice elected mayor of Montreal, a comparative newcomer in politics, but a dynamo in action. He is making five and six speeches a day and is giving the premier the hardest battle of his career.

The Conservatives at present holding only 12 of the 85 seats in the legislature, and a revolution of sentiment sufficiently strong to overturn the big Liberal majority is hardly expected in this election. However, the Conservatives will undoubtedly gain many seats and a definite result upon future legislation is expected to follow.

Test of Party Power.

The contest is being watched throughout the dominion, for it has been made a test of strength by the national parties. The Conservatives have been in power in the dominion as a whole only a year and are anxious to determine the trend of things and extend their control.

Although both candidates for the premiership are French-Canadians and there would seem to be no basis for racial or religious issue, the Montreal candidate is accusing Premier Taschereau of being too partial to British and "foreign" business interests, and is promising the French a greater share of the good things of government. And the Catholic church, while keeping silent as usual during an election, undoubtedly would prefer to see their tried and trusted friend, Taschereau, brother of a cardinal, return to power, than this unknown quantity, the somewhat "parvenu" mayor of Montreal.

Labor Main Trouble.

Two communist organizers have been run out of Quebec recently and there have been several disturbances in Montreal due to this element, which is working among the idle laborers. The labor situation is growing worse with little prospect of immediate improvement. The main trouble for the party in power is coming from these centers. Montreal, however, can swing only 15 seats away from the Liberals, even if it deserts that party entirely.

"I do not see any great change coming," said Premier Taschereau today. "I am confident of victory on Monday. We do not see the end of this unemployment labor trouble and depression, but our people are not going to change governments just because of promises.

Better Off Than U. S.

"The same thing will happen in the United States in your presidential elections. The unemployment situation here is more acute than it was a year ago, but the farmers can almost live on their own products and things are not as bad here as in your country. Labor in the cities is getting angry, but they can hardly add enough to their 12 seats to overturn our party majority."

There have been two riots during the campaign, in one of which three persons were shot by a traffic officer. An investigation of this is now under way. Mayor Houde said yesterday that he had learned that several men of his party would be arraigned for murder Saturday, and that circulars charging that he was surrounded by "bandits" would be dropped over the province by airplanes.

"We have not killed any individual," he said. "We have killed the government. A Conservative government, immediately upon going into office, will increase by five cents per hour the wages of those men now paid 20 cents. We will take a little away from the contractors and give it to the men.

Hints of Session.

"Thirty-four years of Liberal régime have brought the French-Canadians to a low level. The English may wonder why I bear so much on this. Our English people are a close link with the British flag, and they want Canada to remain British. Let them work with us to raise the French-Canadians in the economic scale and they will have the safest possible bulwark against the Americanization of this country and secession. If they do not want to work with us, I tell you that in a generation or two at the outside there is danger of this country going to the United States."

Scene Which Will Be Repeated in October

Copy of famous painting depicting surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. After much discussion the commission in charge of the celebration has decided to permit the reportrayal of this scene in the pageant which will be staged in October. Objections had been made to the re-enactment of this part of our history on the ground that it might be objectionable to Great Britain, but they were overruled.

MUSICIAN ARMY REACHES CITY FOR FESTIVAL

Fair Weather Due for Tonight's Program.

listener even if he sits at the most removed spot in the field. A gigantic amplification, a combination of three amplifying systems, insures this. Huge speakers, concealed from sight, cover every inch of the stadium, and will cast even the softest tone to all sections of the bowl. There will be no "dead spots" in the stadium tonight.

Traffic to Flow Smoothly.

Another important point to be considered in connection with the progress is the ease with which one may enter or leave the stadium. No matter how many thousands attend, and even though they arrive within a short period, they will be admitted into the stadium in a steady and uninterrupted stream. However, it is best to go early, see more, and insure individual selection of seats.

Traffic engineers and officials sponsoring the festival have worked for weeks on perfecting arrangements whereby as many as 150,000 persons will experience no unnecessary delays in entering or leaving the stadium.

As a result, the 11th street bridge and other lanes will be barred to vehicular traffic during the peak hours of the festival, leaving those avenues open to foot traffic. On the other hand, other thoroughfares will be devoted to vehicular movements, for buses and taxicabs and private cars. Incidentally, there is plenty of private parking ground, without the annoyance of self-appointed "watchers."

Ample Guard of Police.

Hundreds of south park and city police will be on hand—the former commanded by Capt. Howard and the latter by First Deputy Commissioner Scanlan.

The entrance of the audience will be speeded by 50 ticket booths, situated at the west approaches to the stadium, and at each gate of the field except that at the north. One may go to any booth and procure tickets; there will be no delay.

At 7:30 o'clock a trumpet call will open the festival. There will follow a parade of the musicians and at 8:38 the united bands will strike up "El Capitan" under the composer, Sousa. Then will follow the playing of "U. S. Field Artillery" under the baton of Victor J. Grabel, the festival music director. For the visual sense there will be fireworks illustrating such martial airs as the "1812" overture and "Sheridan's Ride."

The singing of the "Hallelujah" chorus from "The Messiah" by the massed chorus of 6,000 voices will be one of the high lights of this great musical event.

FINE 2 OFFICERS FOR DRIVING CAR WHILE DRINKING

Peru, Ind., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Two men employed as special deputies by the Marion county sheriff to transport prisoners to the Indiana state prison were fined and given suspended sentences when they pleaded guilty in City court today to charges of public intoxication and driving while intoxicated.

R. J. Cunningham, 30, and William Gill, 32, both of Indianapolis, were arrested by Sheriff Bert Buck last night after their automobile hurtled a ditch and ran into a small creek along U. S. road 31, four miles south of Peru.

They spent the night in jail and when arraigned today were unable to pay their fines. A Peru citizen, however, agreed to "stay" their fines for ninety days, and they were released. Mayor John E. Yarling fined Cunningham $40 and suspended his 30 day jail sentence. Gill was fined $80, given a suspended sentence similar to that of his companion, and his driver's license revoked for one year.

Doolittle Here to Build Plane for Air Contests

Maj. "Jimmie" Doolittle, former champion speed pilot of the army, was in Chicago yesterday superintending the completion of a mystery plane he will fly in the national air races at Cleveland, Aug. 29 to Sept. 7. The ship, according to E. M. Laird, the designer and builder, will be capable of 300 miles an hour. Doolittle was drawn from virtual retirement to fly the ship, which is modeled along the same lines as the fleet plane in which charles ("Speed") Holman won the free-for-all at the races in Chicago last summer. Test flights will be made within a few days.

PETRILLO DECLARES MUSIC FESTIVAL IS GREATEST OF KIND

James C. Petrillo, president of the musicians' union of Chicago, was a visitor at Soldiers' field yesterday to inspect preparations made for the Chicagoland Music Festival to be held there tonight.

"The festival is the outstanding musical event of its kind in the world," Mr. Petrillo said. "I know of no other outdoor concert so magnificent in the number of participants or the scope of presentation. I can assure the listeners that they never will have heard a finer concert band than the 100 piece organization to be led by Victor Grabel. Mr. Grabel and I have culled the lists of all the bandsmen in Chicago to find the men best suited for the band. I expect their playing of the '1812 Overture' to be a musical masterpiece."

Adult band contest, 10 o'clock, Drake and Knickerbocker hotels.

John Philip Sousa, who is to be guest conductor in the Chicagoland music festival isn't any more excited than Mrs. Sousa. Mrs. Sousa accompanied her husband on the Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania railroad, on which they arrived yesterday morning.

Lyon & Healy and the Baldwin Piano company have loaned the finest grand pianos in their stores for use during the festival contests and the concert tonight.

James A. Mundy, one of the leading choral directors of Chicagoland, will be one of the three Negro conductors tonight for the massed Negro choruses. His chorus placed second in the contest last night at the Drake hotel.

The 40 civil war veterans who will be taken into Soldiers' field tonight as the guests of THE TRIBUNE will ride in eight cars donated by the Auburn Chicago company. The veterans will leave the Hotel Sherman at 7 o'clock and will be escorted to the stadium by two motorcycle policemen.

BRITISH COAX GANDHI TO GO TO LONDON PARLEY

BOMBAY, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Secretary for India, Wedgewood-Benn, was understood today to have instructed Viceroy Willingdon to return to his summer palace at Simla and to leave nothing undone to arrive at an understanding with Mahatma Gandhi.

The viceroy forthwith canceled his scheduled tour of India, it was learned, withdrew lengthy counter charges against the Nationalists, and is convening a special sitting of the viceregal council in Simla tomorrow to see if the way can be cleared to enable Gandhi to attend the second round table conference.

This turn of events was understood to have been brought about by two delegates to the conference, who are aboard the S. S. Mooltan on the way to London. They wirelessed fervent appeals to the Indian secretary begging him to have Lord Willingdon meet Gandhi's conditions.

Two of Party Exploring Mountain Killed in Fall

MUNICH, Germany, Aug. 21.—Word from the Paul Bauer expedition climbing Kanchenjunga in the Himalayas said today that Herman Schaller, 25 year old member of the party, had been killed when he and a native bearer fell off a precipice into a deep chasm on the northeastern spur of the mountain.

UKRAINIAN CHOIR WINS HONORS IN CHORUS CONTEST

Meet Singers from Outside Today.

America, white and colored, went down to defeat in the Chicagoland Music Festival contest for choruses of mixed voices in the Drake hotel ballroom last night. The Ukrainian choir, brilliant, resplendent in newly made national costumes, came to the platform, sang the test song, the Festival march from "Tannhaeuser," following it with a song of their own selection, a Ukrainian folk song, and when the judges had added up their figures, the Ukranians by unanimous vote had received first position.

They will accordingly meet the choral winners from the other cities of Chicagoland this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the final contest, which will also be held in the Drake hotel ballroom.

Organized in 1922.

The Ukrainian choir, numbering fifty voices, was organized in 1922. Its conductor is Leon Sorachinsky. The president of the organization is D. J. Maximuck. Although singing much in the Ukrainian language, the English singing of its members is of a high order, which was one of the points in the consideration of the judges.

The Mundy Choristers, a Negro chorus, under the direction of James S. Mundy, was likewise by unanimous vote awarded second place. They sang several spirituals as well as the test "Tannhaeuser" excerpt.

Drill for Event Tonight.

The Chicago and North Western Choral club, appearing under the baton of Harry Slater, was another contestant.

At the end of the contest all the choristers were given a special rehearsal in the "Tannhaeuser" march and the Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah" by Noble Cain, who will direct the massed choruses in these numbers at Soldiers' field tonight.

GERMAN JOBLESS REACH 4,104,000; CITIES END AID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Four million one hundred and four thousand men and women were out of jobs in Germany on Aug. 15, according to official lists published today. These figures stirred Germany because they do not include unemployed white collar men, who number 1,400,000 more than last year at the same date.

The mayor of Berlin, Dr. Heinrich Sahm, added gloom when he announced over the radio today that Prussian cities which have been aiding 781,000 jobless, who no longer receive doles, cannot continue to support them.

35,828 Jobless in France.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Only 35,828 men and women in all France are officially registered as unemployed and receiving government aid. The total is 310 higher than on Aug. 18. Last year at this time only 884 persons were registered.

BRIDE DISCOVERS A PREVIOUS WIFE; SUES TO ANNUL

Franck Bonnet Carre Jr. of New York City was sued in Circuit court here yesterday for the annulment of his marriage to Miss Florence Hamburger, 22 years old, 303 South Mission avenue, Park Ridge, in a bill filed by Attorney Walter Hamilton yesterday.

Miss Hamburger, a former University of Wisconsin student, charges that two weeks after their marriage on July 11 she discovered through an intercepted letter that Carre was already married to Anna Tielsch Carre of Keansburg, N. J. Miss Hamburger said she met Carre in Evanston and had married him after a short courtship.

Miss Hamburger is the daughter of Charles Hamburger, cashier of the Cameron-Amberg company, stationers and printers, 732 West Van Buren street. She said that Carre represented himself as a promoter of professional polo matches.

Identify Would-Be Suicide Who Had Self Jailed

A man who went to the detective bureau on Wednesday and asked to be locked up to prevent him from killing himself was identified yesterday. He is Moe Pomerance, 63 years old, 1359 Touhy avenue. His story was that he was desperate because he had lost $60,000 speculating. Relatives said that he had never had $60,000. Chief of Detectives Norton refused to release Pomerance and charged him with disorderly conduct. He will appear before Judge Borrelli today.

CUBAN SOLDIERS PURSUE REBELS INTO MOUNTAINS

Guerrilla Warfare Rages; Havana Quiet.

BY DEAN SANBORN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Aug. 21.—New reports of guerrilla warfare in the mountains of Oriente province, where federal troops are attempting to round up rebel expeditionary forces after driving them from the city of Gibara, reached army headquarters in Havana tonight.

According to information received here, the casualty list, as a result of new skirmishing, has reached 600 dead and wounded. It is reported that four federal soldiers were killed in today's fighting.

Because of the hilly terrain, federal troops are finding the pursuit of the insurrectionists difficult. Residents of Havana today were warned not to discuss reports of the rebellion except on the basis of official reports issued by the government. There was sporadic fighting in Havana last night, but the disorders were speedily quelled.

AN EYE WITNESS STORY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GIBARA, Cuba [By Telephone to Havana], Aug. 21.—It was shortly after 11 o'clock on the night of Sunday, Aug. 16, when the lookout at the entrance to Semaphore harbor saw lights twinkling. They were apparently flashing from a vessel rapidly approaching Gibara, some seven miles distant. Military authorities became suspicious. They thought it peculiar that a craft should be signaling for a pilot to enter port at that time of night and ordered two soldiers to escort a pilot to the vessel.

When the steamer was a half mile off shore authorities noticed that she continued towards port and they believed that the pilot had found the ship's papers in order. Just as the ship was entering the harbor machine guns poured a rain of lead into the city. The shots were aimed at Fort Vigia. Most of the officers and soldiers in the fort were killed instantly and other loyal troops were forced to evacuate the city.

Pilot and Soldiers Slain.

[It was later discovered that when the pilot and two soldiers boarded the vessel they were murdered because they had refused to permit the vessel to enter].

Machine gun fire continued to pour over every government owned building throughout the early morning of Monday, Aug. 17. A band of filibusters landed at dawn and seized the city. The majority of them were foreigners, including Russians, Poles, Germans, and Americans.

Two planes appeared over the city at 2,000 feet at 9 a. m. Monday. They quickly disappeared. At 2 p. m. the first federal troops from Holguin, under Capt. Renzaga, appeared three miles from the city. As they approached they were met by volleys of gunfire, compelling them to retreat to Holguin. The presence of rebels at Gibara was telephoned and telegraphed to Santiago, Camaguey, and Santa Clara, and reinforcements were demanded.

Battle All Night Long.

As troops were rushed to Gibara, scouting rebel bands met them in the darkness and engaged them in a battle which lasted all night. Trying to keep the troops from entering the city, the rebels forced a wedge between both attacking flanks, formed by Santa Clara and Camaguey reinforcements, pushing the Oriente forces to the rear as they maneuvered to establish a semi-circle around the city's outskirts. Coast artillery fire was then centered on the city by government troops.

The cruiser Patria began bombarding Fort Vigia at midnight, demolishing it by 8 a. m. Tuesday. Before fleeing the rebels answered the attack shot for shot, firing at the cruiser which hove to one mile off shore.

Planes Bomb Rebels.

Planes piloted by Capts. Torres Menier, Eduardo Laborde, Guillermo Martull, Rodolfo Herrera, Carlos Torres de Navarra, Francisco Zayas Bazan, Lieuts. Leonard and Ussa Torres, continuously dropped bombs on the rebels, as well as on steamers outside the harbor.

The rebels, realizing that they were far outnumbered as federal reinforcements arrived, began to evacuate the city Tuesday noon. They were loaded on a waiting steamer, which sailed for an unknown destination, escaping the gun fire from airplanes and the cruiser Patria. The planes pursued the vessel far out to sea, while the Patria continued shelling the city and railroad tunnel, leading from Gibara toward Holguin in which the rebels had taken refuge.

At 7 p. m. of the same day government forces entered Gibara, capturing the city and harbor after two hours of hand to hand fighting. Order was gradually restored throughout the night and panic stricken residents began to search for the bodies of relatives and friends in pitch darkness.

Identify Filibusters' Ship.

Cuban authorities identify the steamer, which landed the rebel expeditionary force, as the notorious Falke, once a German ship. The vessel has been active in several South American revolutions, running arms and ammunition. The commander of the Falke was accused of supplying ammunition to rebels in Venezuela over a year ago and the vessel was seized.

The Falke was later known as the Triton I, the Selbey Abbey, Swift, and Frederick II. It arrived in Havana July 3 with a cargo of rice and was offered for sale. The Cuban government bid $10,000, but the offer was refused. The ship was finally sold to an unknown Cuban, leaving Havana for Halifax July 12 without a cargo. It was never reported as having reached its destination. Upon leaving Havana it carried a crew of Russians, Polish, German and Cubans.

FUN IS OVER; WOMAN JAILED AS EMBEZZLER

Miss Frieda Burrel, 33 years old, who recently occupied an expensive apartment at 1447 North Dearborn street, was under arrest at the detective bureau yesterday on a charge of embezzling $4,000 while working as a bookkeeper for Louis Fox, manager of E. Symons & Co., 329 West Jackson boulevard.

"I was tired of wearing rags, and I wanted a nice big car, and I wanted to see things," she confessed to Sergts. Harry Schuler and Frank Gill at the bureau. "I had an awful lot of fun while it lasted, but I suppose now I'll have to pay."

She will be arraigned on Monday in the felony court.

Spain Serves Ultimatum on Vatican in Church Dispute

MADRID, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The protest sent to the Vatican today by republican Spain against alleged anti-government activities by Cardinal Primate Pedro Segura and Bishop Mugica of Vitoria, now in exile, included an ultimatum allowing the Holy See five days in which to explain whether it had knowledge of documents recently taken from a Catholic cleric on the border, it was announced tonight. The protest was verbally presented to Msgr. Frederico Tedeschino, papal nuncio at Madrid, who forwarded it to the Vatican.

CARDINAL SEGURA.

The documents were said by government officials to have been found on Justo Antonio Echeguren, vicar general of Vitoria, who was detained at San Sebastian last Friday while on his way to visit Bishop Mugica.

The government's protest also accused the cardinal of "grave derogatory efforts."

Send Troops into North.

Minister of Interior Miguel Maura said anti-government feeling in the northern provinces was running high under Catholic and Basque nationalist inspiration, and the government had decided to send several batteries of artillery and three divisions of troops there as a precautionary measure.

The minister announced the troops would merely go through maneuvers in the hope this would exercise a tranquillizing effect.

Senor Maura said the papal nuncio had told him the Vatican had no knowledge of the documents seized at San Sebastian. Nevertheless, the minister declared, the government wanted the Vatican's own confirmation, and this was the reason for the ultimatum.

The seized documents advised the Spanish clergy, Senor Maura said, to dispose of church property and send the money abroad. The government yesterday issued a decree forbidding the sale of church property.

Foil Plot of Assassins.

The government tonight announced the police had frustrated a plot to assassinate Senor Maura as he was leaving the cabinet meeting early today. According to the minister of interior, a communist, a syndicalist and an anarchist were supposed to throw a bomb at him from a motorcycle and sidecar in which they were waiting. The government announcement said police arrived and chased the suspects, who escaped.

DRY LAW'S HUGE COST STRESSED BY CRIME BOARD

Estimates Loss to Nation from Criminality.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The huge cost of prohibition enforcement activities was emphasized by the Wickersham commission today in a report on the cost of crime. It stated that investigation had disclosed that two-thirds of all government expenditures for law enforcement activities in 1930 went to finance the federal attempt to enforce prohibition.

In 1930, the report continued, the government expended $39,657,919 for civil and criminal prohibition enforcement. Of $52,756,202 spent by the government on criminal justice that year, $34,828,550, or 66 per cent, was expended on prohibition administration.

No attempt was made by the commission to assess the tremendous sums expended by states and municipalities on prohibition enforcement. Neither did the commission's investigators attempt to estimate the total crime cost to the nation of the new and modern crimes of racketeering and extortion, although it did state that these activities, following in the wake of prohibition, have grown to such tremendous proportions that a separate and sweeping investigation of this particular branch of crime had been recommended to the President.

Cost of Crime in Billions.

The commission placed the annual cost of crime to the nation at well beyond a billion and a quarter dollars. It listed crime costs until it reached that figure and then figuratively threw up its hands in despair and admitted that no way existed of determining exactly the extent of financial burden placed on the nation by the activities of its criminal components.

The commission found that the administration of criminal justice cost the government more than $52,000,000 annually, while the cost of combating crime for 300 cities of more than 2,500 inhabitants reached the huge figure of more than 247 millions each year. Its investigators reported that crime cost the government and the states and municipalities more than 16 millions annually for insurance, $33,000,000 for postal frauds and $25,000,000 for various kinds of thefts. Indirectly, it said that crime caused a loss in productive labor of enforcement officers of 235 millions and a loss through murders committed of another 127 millions. Watchmen and private police assigned to combat crime cost the nation 159 millions, the commission estimated.

Chicago Costs Given.

The total cost of municipal criminal justice in the city of Chicago for 1930 was given by the commission at $22,-057,150, representing a per capita cost of $6.66.

Crime police costs in Chicago during 1930 amounted to $19,244,249, or $5.70 per capita, the report disclosed.

The cost of criminal prosecution in the city totaled $578,844, or a per capita cost of 17 cents. Of this total cost for criminal prosecution $17,042 was municipal, while $537,995 represented county, state and district expenditures allocable to the city. Also included in the total was $23,807 for jury costs.

Hint at Prohibition Seen.

Some speculation was aroused as to whether the commission had the prohibition laws in mind when in one of its conclusions it called attention to "the desirability of confining the criminal law to those fields of social control where its effective operation is of real importance."

Goldthwaite H. Dorr and Sidney P. Simpson, two of the commission's investigators, also spoke of the desirability of "limiting the extent to which social control by means of the criminal law is attempted."

Whether they had the prohibition law in mind was not stated directly.

"It is clear, we think," these two investigators said, "that the cost of enforcing the criminal law would be less if it did not attempt to forbid and punish acts participated in by large numbers of otherwise law abiding citizens who do not regard such prohibited acts as 'criminal' except in a technical sense. However, the desirability of thus reducing the burden imposed on the taxpaying public by expenditures for criminal justice will undoubtedly be determined in the light of views as to social considerations with which we are not concerned in this report."

Listed Costs Exceed Billion.

Although neither the commission nor its investigators lumped up the total of crime costs which they mentioned, a check-up shows listed costs of $1,344,968,180. They include criminal justice costs, methods of protection, insurance premiums, losses through thefts and fraud as well as such indirect costs as losses in productive labor caused by murder, sending men to jail and utilization of police and enforcement officers against criminals. The list follows:

$155,249,771—Total federal, state and municipal criminal justice costs.
$235,000,000—Loss of productive labor by enforcement officers.
$159,000,000—Cost of watchmen, private police, etc.
$127,000,000—Loss through murder.
$106,222,756—Premiums paid on insurance against crime.
$97,000,000—Loss of productive labor by criminals.
$68,434,342—Loss from fraudulent use of mails.
$58,781,797—Loss from various kinds of theft.
$127,391,432—Embezzlement.
$15,000,000—Insured losses due to auto theft.
$13,000,000—Railroad police forces.
$10,000,000—Burglar alarms devices, etc.
$4,227,271—Safes, vaults, etc.
$3,000,000—Armored cars, etc.
$1,835,876—Theft of railroad freight.
$1,747,889—Riots.
$1,000,134—Jewelry thefts.
$2,000,000—Loss from arson.
$1,376,575—Bank robberies.
$1,200,000—Industrial police in Pennsylvania.
$918,477—Watch-clocks and similar devices.
$650,000—Private contributions to correcting institutions.
$400,564—Mail thefts.
$311,700—Bullet proof glass, etc.

Prohibition played a dominant rôle in the disbursement of federal funds for criminal justice. Tables prepared by the commission investigators disclosed that prohibition police activities cost Uncle Sam $25,644,000; the prosecutions, $966,720; courts, $4,308,004; penal institutions, $3,842,416, and probation and parole, $37,339.

Reporting in detail the commission found that the prohibition law accounts for 49.9 per cent of the various prosecuting activities of the government, 68.3 per cent of the cost of criminal business of the district courts, and 69.1 per cent of the cost of activities of U. S. commissioners."

Of the cost of federal penitentiaries and reformatories the prohibition law accounts for 29.2 per cent, of federal prison camps 29.2 per cent, and of federal prisoners confined in state, county and municipal penal institutions 65.3 per cent. An even larger percentage, 68.6, of the cost of federal probation for various offenses is allotted to prohibition and it is found to account for 70 per cent of the cost of maintaining the office of federal pardon attorney.

Chicago Is Fourteenth.

Chicago is fourteenth among the cities in per capita costs for the administration of criminal justice. Jersey City, N. J., with a per capita figure of $11.30, leads the list. Others follow:

Boston, $9.64; Washington, $9.21; Philadelphia, $8.75; Hoboken, N. J., $8.32; Dearborn, Mich., $7.89; New York City, $7.76; Newark, N. J., $7.71; Detroit, $7.29; Bayonne, N. J., $7.13; Chelsea, Mass., $6.96; St. Louis, Mo., $6.95; Yonkers, N. Y., $6.70, and Chicago, $6.65.

Galesburg, Ill., had the lowest rate —92 cents. It was the only town in the United States with a cost less than one dollar.

VAUCLAIN, ONCE DRY ADVOCATE, SWITCHES; SAYS DRY LAW FAILS

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Samuel M. Vauclain, chairman of the board of the Baldwin Locomotive works, who has just aligned himself with the anti-prohibitionists, changing his original stand, wouldn't discuss today the $10,000 wager he made and won in 1923 that he would not take a drink for a year. Five years ago he declined to state definitely whether or not he had an illegal nip since the wager period ended.

SAMUEL VAUCLAIN. [Paul Thompson Photo.]

As to drinking and prohibition, Mr. Vauclain did say:

"I don't drink because I came to the conclusion long ago that it did me no good. Now, why do something that does one no good? I must say I did enjoy a good drink of rye, years ago. As for beer, I do not think it is fit for anybody to drink.

"I voted for prohibition with perfect sincerity, because I knew that if others could do without strong drink I could, too, and I did want to see the saloon abolished. The saloon went and we have got the speakeasy in its stead, and are no better off, or not so well off as we were before. Therefore I have reversed my stand and I am now opposed to prohibition."

Then he switched to the subject of diet, and explained how he had reduced his weight in recent years from 260 to 160 pounds with an increase in health and vigor.

"I do not drink liquor," he said, "and I drink very little water. A lot of water is not good for you. You get plenty in a number of vegetables and fruits, such as peaches, cabbage, and so forth. I eat red meats, beefsteak, and roast beef, and chops and poultry. No soup; it's no good for anybody."

STATE ARRESTS DRY AGENT WHO USED GIRL DECOY

Faces Possible Year in Jail and Fine.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Ralph E. Dell, federal prohibition agent, who is alleged to have used a 17 year old girl for a decoy, was at liberty tonight under $1,000 bail. He is accused of corrupting the morals of a minor, which may mean a $500 fine and a year in jail if he is convicted.

The man was arrested today as he sat at a liquor hearing before a federal commissioner. He was arraigned before Chief Judge George W. Woltz in city court.

Paid to "Get Evidence."

The girl, Ruth Callahan, created a sensation a fortnight ago when, arraigned in city court on a drunkenness charge after a car she and Dell were riding in crashed into another machine, she said she had been paid to help the dry agent get evidence. She said that on one night's tour she had drunk four quarts of ale and a dozen or so Tom Collinses and gin rickeys.

Richard H. Templeton, federal district attorney, made efforts after Dell's arrest today to effect an immediate release.

"It's only a minor offense," he told Judge Woltz over the telephone.

"Yes, but we are not sure but what it will grow into a much bigger case," Judge Woltz replied.

Wife and Child Along.

While Dell was being arraigned another federal dry agent, John Mirman, was admitting at a commissioner's hearing on a rum raid that he had taken his wife and 7 year old son with him while he went on a trip to Grand Island, near here, seeking liquor evidence. They accompanied him, he admitted, when he entered a place and ordered beer and highballs.

WOMAN AIDS RAID

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Three federal agents, accompanied by a woman, in defiance of a recent order by Federal Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock forbidding the use of women as dry law "stool pigeons," early today raided the Surf club on 52d street, one of the fashionable resorts on the upper east side, and made four arrests.

The agents and their woman companion purchased drinks and sat at a table for an hour before making known their identities.

Liquor Is Confiscated.

A search disclosed a quantity of liquor, and the agents arrested the manager, his bartender and two waiters. They were taken to the East Fifty-first street station and locked up charged with violating the prohibition law.

Thirteen men were arrested and 400 bottles of alleged liquor were seized in a raid at the same address May 8 last.

It was outside of the 52d street address that Lowell Fess, 35 year old son of United States Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, Republican dry leader, was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge early on the morning of June 5 after an argument with Patrolman Richard Broderick.

Woodcock Order Defied.

The raid was followed by an open break over dry policies between Andrew McCampbell, prohibition administrator of the New York district, and Mr. Woodcock.

Col. Woodcock issued an ultimatum eight days ago to the effect that the use of women in trapping speakeasy operators would not be tolerated.

McCampbell declared "ladies must and will be" used in helping gentlemen dry agents gain admittance to places.

"And by ladies I mean ladies," he emphasized. "Under no circumstances will I permit any agent to use a woman of ill repute in their work. They have their orders on that score."

U. S. ACTS TO PADLOCK BASE OF DRY AGENTS AS PUBLIC NUISANCE

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—(AP)—The federal government today had unwittingly moved to padlock as a "nuisance" a base of operations for its prohibition enforcement officers.

Among 46 applications filed in federal court here yesterday for padlocks on places allegedly evading the prohibition laws was one naming a garage which has been rented for several months by federal agents.

Enforcement officers admitted they rented the garage and had used it as a base of operations to catch law violators. Defendants in more than a score of liquor transportation cases have been arrested there, they said.

H. William Holsinger, assistant federal district attorney, said all he knew about the place was that he had received several complaints it was a "bad place." Prohibition officers, he said, had never informed him it was for enforcement purposes.

Customary procedure by agents, it was alleged, was to order liquor sent to the garage and then to arrest the bootlegger.

DR. WILSON RAPS DRY LAW REPORT BY WICKERSHAM

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The Wickersham report on prohibition was termed "a waste of public funds and certainly not worth the time of the commission" by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, in an address before the Idaho Methodist conference here last night.

Selection of the chairman of the commission Dr. Wilson asserted was "on the basis of senility."

He declared the report was "an invasion of private rights and a political move."

BRITISH EMPIRE FIGHTS TO KEEP ITS PLACE IN SUN

Refuses to Admit Nation Is on Decline.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Ever since the world war the British empire has been disintegrating. One by one the ties that bound together the dominions and colonies within the United Kingdom have been snapped, or seriously weakened. Politically and economically the autonomous units, Canada, Australia, and South Africa, are asserting their sovereignty, and now India seems destined to assume at least, as a beginning, a measure of independence.

The empire's huge territorial agglomeration, estimated to cover a quarter of the globe's land surface, and its total population of one-fourth of the inhabitants of the world, is crumbling away into its component parts, escaping from the domination of England, held together only by its lip-fealty to the crown, or in the person of King George V.

Cannot Declare War.

The British government today admits that it can no longer declare war on behalf of the empire, and that the decision to fight for the mother country, henceforth, rests with the authorities of the dominions. Spokesmen of Whitehall confess freely at league of nation's meetings in Geneva and at international conferences elsewhere, such as Locarno, that their signatures cannot bind the empire on such projects as guarantee treaties. Last year, during the five-power naval conference, Downing street could not even consider granting France the security clause which Paris asked as the price of "climbing down" to Italy on the question of naval parity.

England is slipping. London is losing the power and prestige which it formerly held as the center of the earth's finance and as the hub of the world's commerce. England does not yet admit its decadence. London does not yet acknowledge that it has passed the zenith of its heyday, and is now headed along the downward curve.

But history does not record that the competent authorities of Rome, Spain, Portugal or the Netherlands recognized the epoch when their empires passed respectively over the peak and entered the slope on the way to oblivion as world leaders.

Knows Something Is Wrong.

England realizes that there is something wrong—something dead wrong with conditions which are slowly but surely throttling the country industrially. In the last few years the general world depression had tended to scatter forebodings and anxiety and to give a certain feeling of complacency because there were bad times everywhere.

"Misery loves company" and the Wall street debacle, which shook the United States and then reverberated over the rest of the world after the autumn of 1929, had the effect of disseminating the pessimism which had been concentrated on England's plight since the close of the war.

In the last few months, however, or just before the launching of the Hoover plan for the war debt and reparations moratorium, a new and serious factor, accentuated as the weeks passed, focused the attention once more on the unhappy situation of England.

The Flight of Gold.

This latest symptom is the flight of capital, the exodus of gold, the withdrawal of millions of pound sterling of the yellow metal from the vaults of the Bank of England and its bodily transfer by ship and airplane to the strong boxes of New York, but more particularly to Paris, Amsterdam, Zurich, Milan, and even Berlin and Vienna.

France is able to buy English gold because through a lack of confidence here and abroad in the pound sterling that far famed unit of money has depreciated a fraction below the "gold point" quotation representing the exact par value of the bullion.

This tiny depreciation permits the purchase of gold in large enough quantities to enable buyers to pay the costs of its transportation—usually by air in order to save time and insure a quicker redeposit and, therefore, an immediate drawing of interest—insurance, armed guards and its assaying in Paris. Bullion must be chemically tested to prove it is "up to the fineness" as required by the Bank of France before it is accepted.

The stabilized franc is consistently above the "gold point." Thus French operators and speculators can purchase English gold with paper currency any time the pound drops below the standard level.

England Cuts Into Loan.

I am informed that the Bank of England has already utilized half of its $250,000,000 credit jointly extended by the Bank of France and the Federal Reserve bank for three months in the effort to keep the sterling above the "gold point." But even so, continued withdrawals keep driving the pound sterling below the safety figure.

Germany's desperate financial plight has been to a certain extent remedied and the Reichsbank's position is bolstered by the firm measures taken to preserve its gold and foreign exchange and the rediscount credits allocated to the institution. But the position of England, which has become aggravated since Germany passed its crisis, is considered by experts as far more threatening.

"England has never taken her losses which the tremendous internal and foreign debt rolled up by the war required. The time must come when she must face the music and accept the inevitable. Perhaps we are on the threshold of that period."

Worried England Wonders.

That, briefly, is the consensus of what I have been told in my investigation here—by Englishmen and foreigners alike, by economists, regardless of nationality. Lack of confidence in England, a general, increasing belief abroad that Britain's day of reckoning must inevitably be approaching, is responsible for this newest crisis which threatens to reduce her economic position to an even more serious status than that which aroused the United States' government to propose international relief for Germany last June.

England, worried as she is, is wondering whether or not the government's proposed "drastic economies," all around wage reductions, and a possible devalorization of the pound would bring relief.

British Cabinet Splits with Union Chiefs on Cut of Dole

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Two main facts emerged late tonight out of the welter of diversified developments involved in the Labor government's proposals to balance next year's budget by strict economies and additional taxation.

First, the MacDonald cabinet, after a hurriedly called second session, decided that it must continue to govern and refused to accept dictation by the general council of the trades union congress, which is uncompromisingly opposed to the government's economy proposals.

Second, the government has decided that a tariff to obtain additional revenue cannot find a place in its program.

Split Within Labor Party.

The immediate result of the cabinet's decisions means a split with the trades union council, which controls more than 100 Laborite members of parliament and annually donates huge sums to the "war chest" of the party. This break was caused primarily by the opposition of the trades congress to the proposed cuts in the dole and reduction of salaries of government employés. It places the Labor government in a most uncomfortable position and may even lead to the resignation of the cabinet.

However the fact that the cabinet would not give in to demands of the trades union congress was asserted vigorously by one member, who remarked: "The government has decided to govern, and damn the consequences."

Manwhile Mr. MacDonald continued to try to win the support of the leaders of the opposition parties to the budget plans. The Conservatives are especially insistent in demanding drastic economies.

Victory for Snowden.

The cabinet's decision against an emergency tariff represented a victory for Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden and his free trade colleagues. It is believed that danger of a split in the cabinet, coupled with the opposition of the Liberal party, influenced the government to veto the tariff plan. It is understood, however, that 16 of the 21 ministers actually were in favor of the tariff, including Mr. MacDonald, Foreign Minister Henderson and J. H. Thomas.

VETERAN GIVES ALL, HIS BONUS LOAN, TO HELP POOR, THEN DIES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—John J. Fitzgerald will be remembered when cold comes to the motley inhabitants of the colony of the unemployed gathered on the banks of the Monongahela.

Fitzgerald, 42, died today from tuberculosis, largely the result of wounds and gassing of which he was the victim while serving his country in France.

Five weeks ago he obtained a $300 bonus loan and $80 payment in compensation. Since that time he had been aiding the men of the unemployed colony; a pair of shoes here, a hat there, and a shirt or coat to another.

Today, after his death, it was found that his worldly goods consisted of his clothes and 75 cents. The rest had gone to his comrades in poverty.

GAS COMPANY TO FILE NEW RATE SCHEDULE SOON

Bernard J. Mullaney, vice president of the People's Gas, Light and Coke company, said yesterday that the company was preparing a new schedule of gas rates to be filed with the Illinois commerce commission about Sept. 1. He declined to say whether a reduction in the cost of gas to the consumer is in prospect.

A decision is pending in the commerce commission on the gas company's application for permission to raise the heating value of the gas delivered in Chicago by mixing the artificial gas, now in use, with the natural gas piped from Texas which has a higher heat content. The company announced its intention of mixing the Chicago made product with the natural gas as an experiment and members of the state commission indicated they expected a reduction in the cost to the public.

The city through Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton, has asked leave of the commerce commission to intervene and seeks to be heard when the rates are adjusted, if they are.

CANAL LAWYERS FIGHT PUNITIVE RULING BY JUDGE

45 File Their Objections to Decision.

Circuit Judge Thomas Taylor yesterday received objections from 45 lawyers, who were members of the sanitary district law department during the "whoopee days," to the draft of his report as commissioner of the Illinois Supreme court in the disciplinary proceedings brought by the Chicago Bar association. Last July 8 Judge Taylor recommended that nine of the 55 respondent attorneys be disbarred, 11 suspended from practice for two years, and 27 for one year. Many of the cases involved the alleged failure of the attorneys to give a fair return in work for the pay they received. The judge cleared seven and delayed findings in one case.

JUDGE TAYLOR.

The objections were received by the judge in his summer home in California. He will incorporate these objections into his final report, which is to be submitted to the Supreme court in its October term. A ruling is not expected until next January —a year after the beginning of hearings on the lawyers' cases by Judge Taylor.

Hold Judge Is in Error.

The objections of the attorneys for the most part hold that the judge erred in recommending punishment on the evidence submitted. Two objections were filed on behalf of the bar association by Attorney W. R. Matheny. One asks Attorney John B. King, who was cleared in the report, be disbarred and the other that State Representative John C. Garriott Jr., who was recommended for two years' suspension, be disbarred.

In his report Judge Taylor held the evidence against Attorney King to be insufficient. Recently King is said to have appeared at the bar association threatening a libel action because he was named in the proceedings. According to the report, the bar association then prepared the objection, a move which had not previously been contemplated. The objection alleges King deliberately misled the commissioner by false testimony as to the work which he did for the district.

The proceedings against Garriott charged he had placed the name of his brother-in-law, Hugh Miller, on the pay roll of the district as a lawyer without the latter's knowledge and collected a month's pay of $150 before another attorney was substituted in Miller's place. Garriott in his objection declared he did not receive the money but turned it over to Miller's wife. The bar association holds that he should be disbarred.

Two File No Objections.

Two of the 47 lawyers recommended for discipline did not file objections. They are Joseph Paulissen and Harry Mantell, both of whom were recommended for disbarment. Frank J. Brewbaker, Jacob M. Laventhal, George H. Mason, Kleofas Jaszelonis, Stephen A. Malato, Adam E. Patterson and James C. O'Brien, all recommended for disbarment, filed formal objections. O'Brien won the nickname of "Ropes" during his service as an assistant state's attorney because of his vigorous prosecution of cases in which the death penalty—hanging—was asked.

Former State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne, chief of the district's law department from 1926 to 1928, headed the list of eleven lawyers recommended for two years' suspension. Judge Taylor held Hoyne culpable for excessive padding of the rolls, declaring Hoyne should have resigned rather than see the department overmanned. In his objection, Hoyne declared he was bound to serve the dictates of the board and that Judge Taylor exceeded his power in reaching his conclusions from the evidence submitted.

Others File Objections.

In addition to Hoyne and Garriott, the lawyers in this group who filed objections are Arthur Donaghue, Former City Clerk Al F. Gorman, Henry E. Jacobs, Nathan A. Lawrence, Bernard J. Mahoney, Daniel Gallery, Thomas P. Grant, Medard A. Kunz, and Philip A. Lozowick. All contended they gave work in proportion to the pay received and took exception to the code of ethics propounded by Judge Taylor.

The essence of Judge Taylor's 175,000 word report on the case is held by lawyers to be his code of ethics. For the first time in legal history the judge defined the relationship of a lawyer serving a public corporation. The judge held this relationship to be even higher than the obligation owed to a private individual as a client.

Formal objections were filed by the majority 27 lawyers recommended for one year's suspension. But William Scott Stewart, noted criminal lawyer, and Eugene L. McGarry, widely known attorney, both in this class, filed longer objections. Each held the findings unsupported by the evidence and each maintained that he had given adequate service for payment received.

No objections were filed by the seven lawyers cleared. The case against Edward H. Luebeck was referred by Judge Taylor to the Supreme court for further instruction. Luebeck had refused to testify on the ground that he was engaged in confidential matters of an international nature, which he could not disclose. The judge asked authority to investigate these matters.

Film Actor's Son Who Lost Both Legs May Recover

Physicians at the Westlake hospital, Melrose Park, reported yesterday that George Edwards, 12 year old son of Clifton Edwards, film and stage actor, had a chance for recovery. The boy, while playing on the Chicago and Indiana Harbor Belt line railroad tracks Wednesday fell beneath the wheels of a freight train and incurred injuries which made it necessary to amputate both his legs. George was visiting with his uncle, G. P. Wilson, 1214 South 16th avenue, Maywood.

BODY OF REALTY DEALER FOUND IN RIVER AT JOLIET

The body of Michael T. Henneberry, 70 years old, 3536 Jackson boulevard, prosperous retired real estate dealer, was recovered from the Des Plaines river near Joliet yesterday. He had been missing since Tuesday from the home of Mrs. Catherine O'Brien, 308 Raynor boulevard, Joliet, a sister-in-law, whom he had been visiting.

M. T. HENNEBERRY

Henneberry had a nervous breakdown several months ago and had been ailing since. Relatives expressed the belief that he fainted and fell into the river. A woman told Joliet police that she had seen a man answering Henneberry's description standing on the river bank on Tuesday near the spot where the body was found.

Funeral services will be held Monday, at an hour to be announced later, from St. Mel's Roman Catholic church, with burial in Mount Carmel cemetery.

START WORK ON NEW POSTOFFICE BEFORE SEPT. 10

Contract Is Finally Let for Building.

cept one which provided for a cheaper floor material, thus allowing the contractor to reduce his No. 1 bid by $145,000 and thus bring the whole structure within the limit of cost, were effected during the negotiations.

"We will start operations the moment the signed contract is in our hands," Mr. Griffiths said today. "At first we will employ only a few men. As time passes and the work progresses more will be taken on. By November we should have work for 1,000 men. A protective platform from which caissons will be sunk will represent the first piece of work. As soon as sufficient caissons are in place the steel work will begin."

"We figure that it will take about fourteen months to complete the main structure," Mr. Griffiths said. "Our plan is to build the new part of the building first. This section will be completed and ready for use before we begin on the old parcel post building, which is to be incorporated into the one big building we will have when the entire contract is completed. We figure it will take about eight months more to complete the balance of the building."

Some Red Tape Remains.

Although Mr. Griffiths anticipates he can begin operations on Sept. 1, considerable government red tape must be unwound before dirt will fly on the air rights building site. The contract must be signed and sent to Chicago. It is to reach there Monday. The contractors will then sign it and arrange for bondsmen. This done, they will return the contract with bond to Washington. Here it will be examined by the department of justice and the controller general's office. All the bondsmen will be looked up. This will take time. Once approved, the contract is sent to the contractors.

Treasury officials said today that in view of the size of the bond, which will be $7,000,000, it might take several days to check all the bondsmen. Trey predicted, however, that work on the postoffice would be under way the first week in September or not later than Sept. 10.

USE 150 ELEVATOR MEN.

Officials of the Westinghouse Electric Elevator company, whose bid of $739,500 for installing the elevators in the new postoffice was accepted by the government, yesterday said construction of the machinery would provide employment for 150 men a full year. The elevator contract, calling for 19 passenger and 23 freight elevators, was said to be the second largest in point of units let this year. The largest contract for the entire country, said the Westinghouse officials, was for the Marshall Field office building, with 48 elevators.

HOOVER WILLING IF GEN. BUTLER WANTS TO RETIRE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—President Hoover said today that he saw no reason why Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler of the United States marines should not have his request for retirement granted. Maj. Gen. Butler yesterday filed a formal request that he be retired from active duty and suggested Oct. 1 as the date.

In commenting on the matter the President termed Maj. Gen. Butler a "gallant officer," and said that he was sure that there would be no difficulty in getting the general back in the service in case the country got into trouble again.

Maj. Gen. Butler will leave the service at the age of 50, one of the youngest general officers ever to be retired. Did he choose to stay on in active service he would have fourteen years more to serve before reaching the retirement age of 64.

Burglars Steal Gold Star of Late Judge J. A. Bugee

Burglars yesterday broke into the apartment of Mrs. Frances B. Weaver at 514 Fullerton parkway, and stole jewelry and clothing valued at $1,900. She is the sister of the late Judge John A. Bugee of the Municipal court. Among the articles taken were a solid gold star presented to the late jurist by his friends, and four revolvers, one of gold, all inscribed with his name.

Lock Up Clark Murder Jury for Night in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 21.—(AP)—The jury deliberating the case of David H. Clark former deputy district attorney, charged with murdering Charles Crawford and Herbert Spencer, politicians, was locked up at 10 o'clock tonight without having reached a verdict. The jury had been out nearly 31 hours and had deliberated 13 hours and 45 minutes.

GROSS TO APPEAR IN COURT MONDAY FOR BABY FIGHT

Gets U. S. Permission to Come to Chicago.

Capt. Christian Channing Gross, attaché of the American embassy at Ottawa, obtained leave from the state department yesterday to appear before Superior Judge Joseph B. David in his reopened marital litigation with his divorced wife, Mrs. Virginia Harrison, daughter of Francis Burton Harrison, former governor general of the Philippines. Capt. Gross is to attend a hearing Monday. Mrs. Gross is in New York.

CHRISTIAN GROSS.

The latest legal skirmish of a battle which has been waged in New York, Illinois, and French courts, centers on the paternity of a third child, Anna, born to Mrs. Gross three years ago. The child, according to Gross' attorney, Robert E. Cantwell Jr., is variously known as Anna Gross and Anna de Zayas. Cantwell revealed that a charge of adultery had been placed in France against Mrs. Gross and Marius de Zayas, an artist. Gross is said not to have been aware of the child's birth until recently.

Wants Child to Be Heir.

Under a divorce decree, granted by Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel, Gross was awarded custody of two children, Barbara and Peter. Gross is seeking to establish Anna as his daughter and intends to make her heir to a third part of a trust fund of $1,000,000, according to Attorney Cantwell.

Attorney Cantwell conferred yesterday with Attorney Thomas Hart Fisher, representing Mrs. Gross, on the parentage. Fisher is to consult his client. If she acknowledges Gross as the father of the child the action to establish that question will be dropped, Cantwell said.

Fights Modified Decree.

Gross is to fight a motion of his divorced wife to modify the decree of divorce to provide for alternate custody of the children. Fisher presented th modification to Judge David Thursday and won his signature. Fisher is also asking the decree be modified to confirm with an Appellate court decision ordering a paragraph concerning a money settlement stricken.

Attorney Fisher contends a portion of the million dollar trust fund was turned over to Gross by his divorced wife. Through courts, she has sought $250,000 of the sum. According to Attorney Fisher, Gross has been defeated in his attempts to claim this sum. Attorney Cantwel lhas secured an injunction to restrain the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, which has been absorbed by the National City bank of New York, from paying the amount to Mrs. Gross. Cantwell said he received word yesterday from the bank that no payment will be made.

ALCOCK STARTS DRIVE ON AUTOS CARRYING STARS

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock yesterday issued a special order to the department calling attention to the ordinance prohibiting "I-gotta-drag" stars on automobiles operated in Chicago.

"Members of the department will arrest all violators of the ordinance and see that violations are prosecuted vigorously," the commissioner ordered.

The ordinance, passed June 10 by the city council, prohibits the use on an automobile of any star purporting to represent the authority of a local, state, or the federal government, or of any other emblem in the shape of a star. Automobiles operated under the direction of the police department are the only cars exempt from its provision.

Investigation recently disclosed that a number of public officials still had stars on their automobiles. Among them was Mayor Cermak, who claimed exemption as ex-officio head of the police department.

Wife Is Awarded Divorce from John R. Railton

Mrs. Ruth Gibbons Railton, 1511 Cornelia avenue, was granted a divorce yesterday from John R. Railton, son of the founder of the B. A. Railton company, wholesale grocers, and himself vice president of the concern. She charged that he was "continually drunk." She asked no alimony, but her attorney, Robert E. Cantwell Jr., informed Judge John R. Caverly that a substantial settlement had been made out of court. The couple were married Aug. 28, 1922, and have two sons, Burt, 7, and John, 6 years old, custody of whom was awarded their mother.

Bandit Promises Girl to Return Gems 'If Worthless'

Miss Cecil Murphy, 30 years old, of 5458 Everett avenue reported to police last night that she had been robbed of two bracelets and a ring but said the jewelry might be returned to her. She was halted in her car, driven by Henry Duffels, a garage attendant, in front of her home by an armed robber, who took her jewelry. "The bracelets and rings are keepsakes and have no monetary value," Miss Murphy told the robber. "Well," he replied, "if they're as cheap as you say I'll mail them back to you," and he took her name and address.

Bomb Wrecks Front of S. W. Side Drink Parlor

A dynamite bomb was exploded early this morning at the front entrance of the soft drink parlor of Hans Winkler at 36th place and California avenue. The front windows and part of the floor leading to the basement were wrecked, the damage amounting to several hundred dollars. Brighton Park police said that Winkler handles only near beer and that the bombing might have been an effort to intimidate him into using a more strongly alcoholic product.

3 Generations Face Lives in This Novel

David Pinski Writes Saga of New York.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Generations of Noah Edon," by David Pinski [Macaulay]. Published Aug. 20.

DAVID PINSKI is the outstanding literary figure in that branch of the Jewish renaissance which has expressed itself in the creation of a new literature, the Yiddish. His plays have won praise from critics of all languages. His short stories likewise have gained him laurel wreaths. He has written, I believe, only one novel, "Arnold Levenberg," before this one. "The Generations of Noah Edon" is a record of three generations of an immigrant Jewish family in New York, different from the immigrants of most fiction in that they were cultured, God-fearing folk, not doomed to hardships of most first generation immigrants, broad-minded, gentle, kindly people who well might feel, as they received the tragic news which broke up their family, that America had taken as much as it had given to them.

DAVID PINSKI.

The father and mother of the family—the grandfather and the grandmother of the generation which was born in America—are set down with loving care by the author. You feel that to him they are the ideal of their generation. They are tolerant, simple folk who want to make for their sons a happy home in which they can become whatever they wish to become. They have nothing of the traditional czarist attitude toward their children that immigrant parents are wont to have. They yearn deeply for their sons to want to be scholars, but they never drive them to their studies. When their oldest son leaves school to go into business for himself, after only two years of high school, they keep their sorrow to themselves, for they know that they will only estrange him by their disappointment that he did not choose a profession.

When their second son becomes a lawyer they are happy, but when he marries too soon a girl who has [in a mild fashion] trapped him into the union, they say nothing, knowing, wisely that their disappointment, expressed, would do nothing but sever the close tie between them. When the youngest son suddenly gives up his college work, mopes dejectedly about, seems almost on the point of suicide, they very wisely let him alone and are repaid with his choice of medicine as a profession.

Their old eyes are not blind to the fact that their eldest son is no husband to his pretty wife, that no marriage with him is possible except a marriage with business. They are not even blind to the fact that their youngest son is deeply in love with his sister-in-law. They are spared the actual knowledge that he and his sister-in-law are lovers, although they probably would have done nothing about it if they had known, so wise are they in the fundamental fact that lives cannot be interfered with. They remain, those two rocklike old people, firmly rooted in their certainties of right and wrong, of beauty and of ugliness, and their very strength lies in the fact their values remain unswayed by the lives of their children, much as they are torn by them.

The second generation of the three sons and their wives is a generation of America superimposed on a racial culture. In the eldest son the commercial opportunities of America foster his innate genius for trading, and he becomes a vastly wealthy merchant. He lives for nothing but his business, and his wife lives for nothing but love. When she doesn't find that in her husband she turns to his young, adoring brother, and then to a series of lovers. Her son, who has the love of neither his mother nor his father, pays for the heritage which his parents have given him.

The second son, trapped into marriage, becomes an adoring husband and father, spoils his daughter sinfully and surfeits his wife with his affections until she runs away with the chauffeur. And that wreck induces an even more devastating wreckage.

The third son, after suffering tortures over his affair with his sister-in-law, feeling that his life is accursed on account of his sin, chooses to become a children's doctor, marries a nurse who devotes herself to social service work and gives him one child, a boy with almost painful ideals, so evident is it that he will have them wrenched from him in his fight with reality.

Of the third generation only that boy remains, at the end of the book, to carry on the name of Edon.

Mr. Pinski writes with a crisp, unembroidered, factual style which has little beauty, but which has a certain violent power. It is the English of a man who is not completely at home in the language, a writer who has learned his English through conversation rather than through reading, perhaps. It expresses facts better than it expresses ideas. But it is facts with which he is dealing in "The Generations of Noah Edon," and for his purpose his style is very effective.

Robert Clive Gets Place in Literary Sun

Clerk Who Got India for Britain Depicted.

BY AL CHASE.

ONE of England's outstanding soldier-statesmen, Lord Robert Clive, who virtually laid the foundation in India for the great British empire in the face of almost unbelievable obstacles placed by both Englishmen and foreign foes, is vividly portrayed in "Clive" [Appleton], by R. J. Minney.

The author, an English newspaper man, spent several years in India, visiting the scenes of Clive's stirring and rapid rise from a drab clerkship to the pomp and fortune of virtual governor-general of all India; a title, by the way, he always craved but never won.

Clive's tumultuous career was a succession of battles with armies and individuals. He fought for and won India to the English flag. Interwoven with his military struggles was probably as heartrending a series of virulent attacks by envious and ambitious Englishmen as any public man ever had to contend with.

In the end his enemies won. Although Clive was perhaps the richest man in England when he returned from India for the last time, being many times a millionaire and owning estates galore, his peace of mind was wrecked through bitter insinuations that his wealth was not honestly gained. He took to drugs and died with the hint of suicide clouding his fame.

Of especial interest to American readers is the fact that Clive was asked by his king to accompany the British forces to America and lead them to victory in the revolutionary war. But his drug stained mind couldn't rise to the opportunity and by a strange bit of irony his chief enemy and accuser, Gen. John Burgoyne, was sent instead.

"History is agreed not only that Clive would never have stooped to surrender, but that, with him in command against the Americans, the Fourth of July would not so early have been established as a festival of independence across the Atlantic," says the author.

"Clive had won an empire, a fortune and a peerage," says Mr. Minney. "He felt he had a claim to the gratitude of his nation. Instead, his fame had been dragged through the mire.

"History was slow. Save for Shrewsbury, which honored him in a hundred years, it was not until our own generation that a single memorial was raised to his name either in his native country or in the vast empire he founded."

Voltaire's Love Affair Is Subject of Maurel Book

"The Romance of Madame Du Chatelet and Voltaire" by André Maurel [Appleton] is an especially interesting book to the student of eighteenth century life. The character of Voltaire and the story of his romance with the learned marquise have been delightfully depicted.

M. Maurel reveals how the intellectual yet passionate friendship that existed between the two affected their literary life. He tells vividly of their quarrels and reconciliations and of the final breach which separated them forever.

SAME STORY TOLD 18 TIMES MIGHT WEARY THE READERS

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence]—I recently mentioned that a number of prominent writers [18] had all agreed, at the suggestion of John Fothergill, the poet-publican of Thame, to write a short story on the same theme. The book was to have been called "Variations Upon a Theme"; but several of the contributors considered that this title could be improved. One suggested "Obliging Mr. Fothergill"; another "The Hoop — Held by Mr. Fothergill"; but one, more inspired than the rest, demanded that the book should be known as "The Fothergill Plot!"

H. M. TOMLINSON.

As I write, this is the title resolved upon. There will be eighteen contributors, and while for the ordinary reader I can imagine nothing more tiresome than a single story told eighteen times over, students of short story technique probably will be delighted at the opportunity of seeing how authors' minds work. Collectors will collect the book for the sake of individual items.

Collectors, by the way, should remember a curious and very interesting book published within the last seven months entitled, "The Book of Fleet Street." So should those who enjoy gossip about writers. The book was edited by the late T. Michael Pope, and Pope was in himself a particularly interesting figure.

When I was a boy, and worked for a London publisher, I used to go with a friend to drink tea at a Strand teashop. My friend and I constantly noticed, sitting at a table near by, a man who carried about half a dozen books.

We eyed him. To us, he was a romantic figure. "Reviewer!" we said to each other. But we did not know his name. He was a short man, very dark, rather grim. Whether he also eyed us and said "Literary pups!" I do not know, for I never spoke to him. For twenty years I saw him in the street at intervals, always carrying a bundle of books under his arm. I was curious about him. But we never knew each other. Then, one day, I saw a photograph in a newspaper. I recognized my man. But alas he was dead! He was Michael Pope.

Everybody who knew him loved Pope. All describe him as always having under his arm a bundle of review books. And one day it occurred to him to make a book about the scene of his labors for a quarter of a century or more. He knew all the journalists who have written books. He knew H. M. Tomlinson, Robert Lynd, Henry Williamson, Hilaire Belloc, Carodo Evans, G. B. Stern, J. B. Priestley, and Arthur Machen, to mention only a few. And he asked each of his friends to contribute to his book about Fleet street. Of course, they all agreed to do what he wished; and "The Book of Fleet Street" is the result. It is a book full of entertainment, casts many sidelights upon famous writers, tells much about the London newspaper world [one of the best contributions is that of Mr. James Bone, the brother of Mr. Muirhead Bone and Mr. David Bone and London editor of the Manchester Guardian], and is a splendid memorial to Pope.

"Seeing South America" Is Good Book of Travel

In "Seeing South America" [Revell] John T. Faris, an experienced world traveler, tells just about everything the dijettante journeyer to our southern continent should be sure to glimpse. Mr. Faris speeds round the rim of South America, visiting all the great seaport cities, and makes occasional jaunts into the interior to see and describe historical and scenic spots worth visiting. It's an attractive travel book.

$1 OIL BY MONDAY IS PREDICTED AS WELLS STAY SHUT

Murray Confident; In East Gasoline Price Soars.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Petroleum began to climb the price ladder today, mounting well toward dollar oil and apparently auguring higher prices for gasoline at automobile filling stations.

W. E. MURRAY.

As the Texas company, important midcontinent buyer, posted increases in four states, Gov. William H. Murray said he believed major purchasers would agree by Monday to $1 a barrel—the top he has set in return for the opening of his state's proration.

Texas company prices in Oklahoma were advanced 20 cents for high gravity oil to 70 cents a barrel. Advances for Texas, Louisiana, and New Mexico fields ranged from 11 to 30 cents a barrel, to a similar top.

Confident of Better Times.

The upward trend also extended in at least one locality to the retail gasoline market, and southwestern oil men, confident of better times since mill shutdowns in Oklahoma and east Texas took an estimated 900,000 barrels daily from the market, heard other news indicating stabilization of the depressed industry may not be remote.

Gov. Murray spoke of rumored mergers of major oil companies and said he thought "they'll be in by Monday" on his $1 price. He reiterated his decision to require all companies taking oil from the same producing horizons to agree to the dollar price, a conservation plan and proration before wells are opened.

Trouble, he said, would be experienced in allowing some unnamed companies which he says have agreed to the $1 price to open Oklahoma City field wells. He also sounded a warning to midcontinent states to "not let this thing get away from them when the fields are opened again." He contended "we can't trust the oil men with it—they would hog one another."

Mark Up Gasoline Price.

At Tulsa, independent marketers of the Sinclair Refining company noted up the price of low grade "competitive" gasoline from 11 cents a gallon to 13 cents at filling stations. The independents said they intended to show the major companies they were not attempting to prevent other crude prices by keeping gasoline rates down.

In the east, the Standard Oil Co., of New York advanced the price of gasoline in tank car lots half a cent a gallon to six cents and the Stoll Oil Refining Co. hiked Kentucky crude from 55 cents a barrel to 65 cents.

Reduction on file in the midcontinent indicate that a one-cent increase in the price of gasoline usually follows a boost of 20 cents a barrel in the price of crude.

Hold Conference On Sept. 11.

Those looking into the industry's future were busy. At Topeka it was announced the Standard Oil companies of Indiana and New Jersey and the Gulf Petroleum Corporation had asked Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico and Arkansas in agreeing to send representatives to a conference Sept. 11 where the oil advisory committee of the Kansas Public Service Commission plans to propose a uniform plan of curtailment of oil production and importation.

A movement by certain independent oil interests for an oil "czar" took form of pamphlets in Wall street, nominating Robert W. Stewart, former chairman of the board of Standard Oil of Indiana, who broke with John D. Rockefeller Jr., as a likely candidate.

A top price of 70 cents a barrel was reported paid today in the east Texas field, where oil sold as low as 10 cents a barrel before the shutdown under martial law. Pete Burton, east Texas operator, said at Tyler, Texas, he had sold 40,000 barrels at that price.

3,660,225 Barrels Stored In Texas.

A military report on the amount of crude oil stored in the east Texas area showed pipe line holdings as 3,660,225 barrels and independent refineries as 23,000 barrels. The figures were as of Aug. 12.

A leader in the fight for curtailment of the great east Texas field, Cyr. J. F. Lucey, said he would propose that the Texas railroad commission designate the east Texas allowables for at 300,000 barrels daily, less than half the daily average before it was shut in. He said this would insure a $1 posted price.

Crude oil price increases were forecast for California by R. C. Walsh, of the Allied Petroleum Corporation, as the result of technical improvements in the industry.

CHICAGO GASOLINE MAY SOAR.

As prices of oil shot up, Chicago oil executives saw in the shutdown of the east Texas and Oklahoma fields the forerunner of stabilization for the oil industry and of a general price boost in gasoline for the midwest market. The expected price boost, an official said, probably will include Chicago, which last week saw prices tumble to the lowest level in the city's history in a new outbreak of the controversy precipitated a few months ago by the introduction of a new competitive grade of fuel. Chicago's prices yesterday were 10 cents for the new competitive grade, 11 for medium and 12 for high grade, including a three cent state tax.

SEE BLACKMAIL HINT IN MISSING JAPANESE CASE

Gamblers on Ship He Vanished From.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A thread of blackmail was cobwebbed into the puzzle of the disappearance of Hasashi Fujimura, wealthy Japanese business man, a week ago from the liner Belgenland while on a whoopee cruise when authorities learned today that three professional gamblers were aboard the ship on its holiday jaunt to Halifax and back.

The three, one with a criminal record as a blackmailer, boarded the liner at Halifax and were on the same deck as the Japanese when he vanished into the night somewhere off Fire island early last Friday.

The Red Star cruiser returned today from its cruise following the trip on which Mr. Fujimura vanished and federal agents questioned twenty employés of the ship between the time it arrived and departed for its regular trans-Atlantic voyage late this afternoon.

Daughter Dies, Another Born.

The riddle which was brought from the sea remained a riddle, despite developments here, in the spacious walled estate at Norwalk, Conn., where Mrs. Fujimura lives and where a daughter has died and another has been born in the week that has passed and in the opulently furnished summer home at Rye, N. Y., where Mary Reissner, companion of Fujimura on the cruise, makes her residence.

Mrs. Fujimura, shy little Japanese woman, gave no intimation that she believed her husband dead when questioned by detectives. The same day her husband disappeared her 3 year old daughter died. Yesterday her fourth child was born. Toshika, a frail but beautiful child of seven, who made the voyage with her father, now is at the Norwalk home, as is the eldest Fujimura child, a boy of twelve.

Many Parties at Home.

At Rye, further down the Long Island sound, neighbors pointed out the summer cottage where Mary Reissner lived before the trip with Fujimura on which she was booked as "governess." Mrs. Reissner first came there three months ago, they said, and sometimes three small Japanese children could be seen playing in the yard. There were parties with plenty of liquor in evidence, the neighbors reported, and considerable noise. The male guests, it was said, always were Japanese.

Mrs. Reissner, however, has fled to her town apartment. Before she left Rye she refused to talk to newspaper men and told them "If anybody talks it will be my lawyer."

No Motives Established.

During the questioning of the Belgenland employés the authorities swung from one conjecture to another in their effort to get at the truth of the mystery. If Fujimura was murdered no one was present to witness and report the crime. If he threw himself overboard, he did it without being seen. So far, no actual motive for murder or suicide has been established.

There is but one conclusive fact to be added to the bald record of his disappearance. That is that the Japanese was in terror of some person apparently aboard the ship a few hours before he was seen for the last time. This raised the question as to whether blackmailers had followed Fujimura on the cruise for the deliberate purpose of terrorizing him into making heavy contributions.

Cut Pullman Rates to Boost Excursion Travel

An experimental reduction of approximately 25 per cent in the sleeping car rates between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, with the aim of increasing summer excursion travel, will be put into effect on Aug. 29 by the Pullman company, James Keeley, vice president, announced yesterday. The new rates will prevail only on round trip tickets issued for excursions starting on five successive Saturdays, from Aug. 29 to Sept. 26, inclusive. Return journeys must be completed by Oct. 20. There will be no stopover privileges.

Husband of Society Girl Is Held as a Bigamist

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Thornton L. Motley, formerly of New York, was held for trial on a bigamy charge today. The charge was filed by Motley's second wife, Mrs. Yvonne Pollon Motley, Santa Barbara, Cal., society girl, who recently obtained an annulment of her marriage when she learned Motley had another wife in Cleveland, O. The first wife later obtained a divorce.

RESIGNATION ASKED OF STATE SENATOR SHOT IN GIRL'S HOME

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—State Senator Roy T. Yates of New Jersey, who was seriously wounded while in a young woman's apartment here, was asked today by the Republican leader of Passaic county, N. J., to resign as the county's representative in the state senate "to save political embarrassment to his party, his friends, and himself."

ROY T. YATES. [Daily News Photo.]

The demand was by State Controler John McCutcheon, also chairman of the executive committee of the Passaic county Republican organization, for many years Senator Yates's close friend and political associate.

Former Judge Robert Carey of Jersey City called upon Gov. Morgan F. Larson to "order all the fake [railroad] passes in at once" as the result of the revelation that Miss Cramer was on a list of 1,800 persons holding state passes.

The senator, who is in the Ruptured and Crippled hospital, where only today he was declared out of danger from a bullet wound in the abdomen, was requested to send his designation "by return mail."

Meanwhile, Miss Ruth Jayne Cramer, accused of shooting the senator, was released in $7,500 bail today when it was established that Yates is out of danger.

NAUTILUS READY FOR CRUISE UNDER ICE; ENTERS PACK

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins, pushing into the arctic in the submarine Nautilus, radioed the newspaper Acht Uhr Blatt today that the submarine had entered the ice pack zone and already had penetrated twenty miles, traveling at the rate of eight knots through floating ice. Navigation was very difficult, the message said.

"Floating icefields ahead already are becoming thicker," the message said, "and soon we expect to strike more compact masses. When we sight icefields that seem suitable for a diving trial we will halt and prepare to submerge.

"We passed Charles foreland early yesterday and headed north to where whaling vessels told us two weeks ago we would find the ice limit. There were snowstorms all that day, and high north winds, sending the temperature down and turning the snow to hail which bombarded our deck. Probably we'll have to heave to somewhere tonight to prepare for our first cruise under the ice."

VET HUNTS WORK; BABY'S CLOTHES AND AUTO STOLEN

Harold Gibbs, Canadian war veteran, walked dejectedly into the Town Hall station yesterday. "Some one stole our automobile," he told Desk Sergt. Joseph Ferroni.

Gibbs continued his story. He, his wife, and their 10 months old baby were driving from Vancouver to Toronto, he said, in hopes of finding employment. They cut into the United States on the chance that some work might be found en route. Thursday night they stopped at the Marigold hotel, 3750 Broadway, parking their car in front. In the morning the machine was gone.

"In our car was most of our baby's clothes," said Gibbs. "Most of our luggage was there, too. We need the baby's clothes."

Gibbs said he had just enough money to journey to Toronto by bus. He left with the assurance of Sergt. Ferroni that every effort would be made to find the stolen car and the baby's clothes.

Loan Company Official Freed of Larceny Charge

William Walsh, a manager of the Louis E. Bower Automobile Loan company, was acquitted of a charge of larceny yesterday by Municipal Judge Rooney in the Felony court. Walsh was charged by Mrs. Vivian Kittle, 845 Eastwood avenue, with taking her automobile when she failed to sell a radio placed in her car. Evidence was offered showing that Mrs. Kittle's contract as a radio saleswoman provided for confiscation of her automobile if she failed to sell a required number of radios.

ISSUE WARRANTS FOR 9 BONDSMEN UNDER NEW LAW

Open Drive to Enforce License Act.

Municipal Judge Frank M. Padden issued warrants yesterday charging eight professional bondsmen and a surety company with posting bonds without having obtained a state license. It was the first gun in the drive to enforce the state law which went into effect July 1, compelling professional bondsmen to get licenses.

JUDGE PADDEN.

The surety concern was the Lexington Surety and Indemnity company of New York, formerly the Grand Central Surety company. It is now barred from offering surety in the local federal courts, for failure to pay on forfeited bonds.

Under U. S. Investigation.

The Grand Central company was the subject of an investigation by the federal grand jury last fall following charges that Ralph Capone had an interest in the Chicago agency of the concern. That was denied by John Lynn, head of the local agency, and the jury reported that it found no evidence to support the charge. The company has been surety for a number of Capone hoodlums and other public enemies.

The bondsmen whose arrest was ordered were R. J. Frierson, 5356 South Michigan avenue; John Garneau, 4328 Langley avenue; Ben Sockel, 940 Maxwell street; C. J. Thomas, 4019 South State street; Louis Schiavo, 4445 Barry avenue; Saul Nathanson, 6953 Merrill avenue; Walter L. Harrison, colored, 3123 Giles avenue; and Kenneth D. Adams, colored, 6439 St. Lawrence avenue. Judge Padden set bonds at $1,000 each.

Other Warrants to Follow.

Other warrants will be issued within a few days, said Assistant State's Attorney A. C. DeWitt, head of the bond department in the state's attorney's office. At a conference recently between State's Attorney Swanson and Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court, the prosecutor charged that sixty unlicensed professional bondsmen were operating in Chicago, and that only six bondsmen in the whole state have taken out licenses.

In issuing the warrants, Judge Padden pointed out a provision of the law under which it is possible for a person who has paid an unlicensed bondsman to post a bond to collect from the bondsman damages in a sum three times the fee paid.

G. E. CO. TAKES RECORD SPACE FOR 1933 FAIR

A contract for 9,000 square feet of exhibit space at the Century of Progress exposition was signed yesterday by the General Electric company. This is the largest space so far contracted by any exhibitor with the exception of the General Motors exhibit which will occupy its own building.

Significance is attached to the General Electric company's exhibit because of its position as a pioneer in scientific research, a fair official said.

Announcement was also made that the Federal Electric company has signed a contract for space in the electrical building.

Report Firemen Over 65 Will Be Forced to Retire

According to reports in the city hall yesterday members of the fire department over 65 years of age may be forced to retire after a similar campaign has been completed in the police department. Acting Fire Commissioner Daniel A. Carmody said he would make no statement until official action was taken but it was reported that 40 veterans in the department would be affected by such an order—including two battalion chiefs and a number of captains and lieutenants.

MAYOR PRAISED FOR HIS WAR ON "POLICY" GAMES

Citizens' Association Tells Spread of "Shops."

Mayor Cermak was praised by the Citizens' association yesterday for his war upon the "policy shops," which have been extensively patronized by the south side colored population. A letter to this effect was sent him by Francis E. Broomell, president of the civic group.

"As you have said," the letter stated, "policy is not even a gambling game, but it is a plain swindle, which takes money in small sums from a multitude of those who need it most. It is patronized extensively by women and school children whose losses must add appreciably to the misery existing in the community under present conditions of unemployment.

Recalls War in 1908.

"In 1903 the Citizens' association called public attention to the magnitude of the policy shop evil in Chicago, the receipts of the policy syndicate at the time being estimated at more than $5,000,000 per year. By a persistent campaign of prosecutions, in which the state's attorney gave active coöperation, aided by the police, the number of policy shops in the city was reduced from 1,200 to a fraction of that number, and the remainder were closed through enforcement of a drastic anti-policy statute drafted by us and enacted by the legislature in 1905.

"That drastic law is still in force.

"For a number of years thereafter the policy swindle was virtually nonexistent in Chicago, as the heavy penalties provided by the 1905 act give the authorities all the weapons they need for that purpose.

Start to Operate Again.

"Under Mayor Thompson's loose administration, however, policy shops again were permitted to operate under political protection in the so-called black belt.

"The Citizens' association will follow with keen interest your efforts, through the police department, to cleanse Chicago of this contemptible 'skin game,' and we will be glad to coöperate with you in any way in our power to that end."

LIQUOR MAKER SHOT TO DEATH AS HE DISTILLS

For Adolphe Petrovski prohibition meant opportunity. At its advent he was already too old to make a living as a laborer, as he had in his youth. So he became a moonshiner and prospered, according to his standards.

He passed his 77th birthday early in 1931. To friends who visited him recently in his home at 1820 Hastings street he confided that the depression had not wiped him out. There was still a market for his liquor. His house was immaculately clean, he had $1,200 in the bank, and no relatives to worry him. He added that his work was pleasant and he could do it when he liked.

Last night Petrovski filled a ten gallon boiler on his kitchen stove with mash—he had a whole barrel of it ready. Apparently he intended to cook all night and add the finished product to the stock of five gallons he had on hand from previous cookings.

Shortly before 11 o'clock neighbors heard two shots in his little flat, which is in the rear of a larger building. When they went to investigate they found Petrovski dying. He had been shot twice in the abdomen. His mash was still boiling. Before midnight he died at the county hospital. The police were unable to find any trace of his assailant.

FLYER HUSBAND OF CHICAGO GIRL MISSING IN CHINA

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Aug. 21.—Grave concern is felt here for the safety of Vicomte de Sibour, who took off from Peiping, China, more than ten days ago for an airplane flight to Nanking and has not been heard from since. According to a dispatch from Shanghai Aug. 10, the young French airman intended to pick up the British minister, Sir Miles Lampson, at Nanking and fly back with the diplomat to his post at Peiping.

It is not known here if the count's wife, who was Violette Selfridge, daughter of Gordon Selfridge, London department store owner and former Chicagoan, and who accompanied her husband on a flight from Paris to Peiping, was in the plane with him when he left for Nanking.

It is feared De Sibour may have been forced down among bandits in the flooded district of northern China.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

PUBLIC WORKS FOR CHICAGO.

When congress meets this winter there will be a stampede of relief proposals. The most respectable of these will be for federal works. Appropriations will be asked and granted for public improvements chiefly because of the demand for relief of unemployment. Under cover of this temporary need some unjustifiable expenditures will be authorized, some projects without merit will benefit, but there is much in the way of public works which ought to be done for its own sake as well as for unemployment relief.

The Illinois and Chicago representation in congress will be tested in this situation. There are a number of projects which ought to be energetically developed quite apart from the employment they will give in this emergency. Work on the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway in Illinois ought to be accelerated and completed this winter, the Calumet harbor plan should be pressed. The Fox river channel improvements, a better harbor for Chicago and for Waukegan, and an adequate harbor of refuge to break the long stretch of dangerous coast between them are other real public needs which our delegation should have included in the government's program.

They will not be found there unless there is more vigorous and effective representation than we have usually had. Although Chicago and the metropolitan area pay heavily in taxation for the upkeep of national government and for the public works which other communities demand, our needs are given chilly consideration at Washington. In the present emergency Chicago citizenship proposes to do all it can to meet its own proper responsibilities and is not cap in hand on Capitol hill. But if congress is to relieve unemployment by government works, the projects we have named should not be neglected as they have been. They will be permanent benefits. They will be emergency relief for the unemployed, of which Chicago will have more than its share, since we have not only the care of our own but of the thousands of men from the rural and industrial districts of the midwest which move in upon us every winter.

THE WATER METER FRAUDS.

In the former administration of Chicago government the installation of water meters proceeded at the rate of two a day, the plumbers getting full pay for this limited work. It is estimated by some engineers that sixteen meters a day could be installed. The present arrangements by which the department of public works is correcting the frauds of recent years will provide a minimum of five installations for a day's pay, which seems to be a compromise between a fair day's work and utter demoralization. The amount lost to the city by the dishonest method of metering the water supply can be estimated anywhere from a quarter to a half million dollars. It is not to be thought that the man who paid workmen for no work failed to exact a heavy price.

The excess over reasonable cost was simply graft. It was typical of nearly every bit of public work done and the system has brought the city to its present bankrupt condition. It accounts for unpaid bills, unpaid employés, suspended services, the empty treasury, ruined credit and black prospects.

These frauds should not be allowed to go unpunished. The persons who committed them have a legal responsibility for them and attempts should be made to force restitution of the money out of which the city has been swindled by jobbery in many notorious cases.

COMRADES ALL.

The United States of America must be puzzledom to Comrade Stalin of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He must be uncertain whether the U. S. A. is ahead of him or behind him or on both sides of him, but fairly sure that it is on the same road. It is supposed to be antipodal, but how can a comrade justify that supposition? By reference to what facts? By what demonstrations does the United States prove its antipathy to Moscow?

Texas cavalrymen are riding the oil fields conquering production. Oklahoma bayonets are hedging in the Oklahoma pumps. Brother Stalin would assume that the states had taken over these utilities. Alfalfa Bill has fixed the price of oil at a dollar. Howdy, Comrade! The capitalistic system of free and competitive enterprise is flattened out somewhere under the lanky figure of another great commoner. Kansas, at this writing, contemplates action by the people's commissars.

The federal farm board, with a wheat crop in one hand and a cotton crop in the other, looks about for a place to dump both of them. Stalin would find heresy only in the method of getting these crops. He would have confiscated them. The odd Americans bought up one surplus to create another. Stalin would have impounded the grain and cotton and if the growers had protested he would have sent them to Alaska. Nevertheless, the United States is in the grain and cotton business and it may learn the way of a communistic state with the tillers. Stalin would find the farm board in the red, but think it was a crazy way of getting there, although approving the color.

He would also approve a system by which the government controls the revenue of the railroads and tries to take the profits, but would reflect that the profits under a communistic system needn't occupy any of a comrade's speculative time. He knows there won't be any. He would be delighted with a government program which subsidized the making of wine and prohibited its sale. An inconsistency is valuable for its own sake. It is the spice in the philosophy. The jolly commissars themselves encourage the worker to better his lot in life by taking from him the fruits of his labor. It inspires him to cheerful effort.

Comrade Stalin, observing aspects of life in the U. S. A., seeing Uncle Sam digging up the barberry bushes, closing the Texas bridges and sticking liens on the farmers' garden produce, would be at a loss to know what to make of it all. He probably would conclude that he had eaten something that disagreed with him and go to bed with a headache.

CERMAK CUTS PAY ROLLS.

The reduction in government costs which Mayor Cermak is undertaking involves the cutting down of pay rolls and the elimination of jobs. In a political unit in which the democratic principle worked ideally the economical and considerate administration of public affairs would be of political advantage. The public served by a prudent administrator would appreciate the service and the saving. Democracy has its ideal standards but does not attain them. In the real world of politics the reverse holds true much of the time.

A wasteful, reckless administration may increase its political strength by the very methods which injure the citizens. Even a criminal abuse of trust, building up an organization of unworthy and unneeded public servants who draw pay but do not serve, may get the reservoir of votes which carry elections. Political management frequently learns that reduction of government costs does political damage. The citizens served may be unappreciative of the benefits given them and the persons who profit from extravagance and waste never forgive the injury done them.

Chicago certainly has had lessons enough in such political realities to support a mayor when he sets out to conduct city government for the benefit of the taxpayer and not of the tax consumer. Mr. Cermak is doing what political management avoids, cutting down costs and reducing patronage. If that policy is to succeed it must have intelligent public support.

CALIFORNIA DIVIDES THE LOOT.

Southern California has divided the Boulder dam swag. Los Angeles and nearby cities get 550,000 acre feet of water, the metropolitan district of San Diego gets 662,000 acre feet, and the ranchers of the agricultural groups 3,850,000. The dispute over the split of the improvement of navigation in the Colorado river was bitter. The agricultural and metropolitan groups were united in the determination to navigate the United States treasury and later to take the spoil away from the sister states associated in the buccaneering enterprise, but then the jolly boys themselves fell out.

It may be inherent in fraudulent profit to evoke all of the predatory instinct. If the California regions affected had been paying for their water as they required it they probably could have made a division of costs and advantages in a half way honest fashion, but having succeeded in getting the money out of the federal treasury they were merciless in their determination to gouge each other as well as everybody else.

A California tourist trade promoter says that in estimating the pull of the state's attractions thirty per cent is accredited to the climate. If that climate furnished its own water for new subdivisions the United States would be better off at the present calculation by $167,000,000 and the avoidance of scandalous evidence that under shrewd handling Uncle Sam is a prize chump.

FEDERAL PROHIBITION AGENTS.

Federal prohibition agents raiding a Milwaukee home caused the death of a housewife by leaving an extension electric light burning in the basement where they had smashed in some wine kegs. The woman stepped into a pool of wine in trying to disconnect the extension and was electrocuted. In Buffalo there was the case, disclosed in the city courts, of a federal agent who employed a young girl to make "liquor buys" and became so intoxicated with her that both had to be taken up by the police. In East St. Louis a prohibition administrator is charged with the unlawful retention of money seized in a liquor raid.

These incidents are in the news of a day. No one regards them as unusual in prohibition enforcement, but rather accepts them as indicative of the character of the agents used by the federal government in a work which has no attraction for men of a different type. It has become so that no jury in the trial of liquor cases is justified in accepting the unsupported word of a federal prohibition agent. The actions of the agents and the methods of enforcement are evidence of untrustworthiness. A charge supported only by their testimony lacks credibility.

FREE SPEECH.

[Waterville, Me., Sentinel.]

Freedom of speech, indeed! Radicals flock into this country and start condemning and criticizing us before they can even speak English or tell a county jail from a madhouse, insisting on saying what they please, as they please, and when they please, since this is a free country, isn't it? If even kindly curbed they fly into berserk rages over personal liberty, and especially free speech. And yet when a man of the standing and experience of ex-Gov. Baxter, in his own state and among his own people, dares to criticize shrewdly and temperately communism or any other radicalism he immediately begins to receive letters threatening his life! Doubtless Mr. Baxter is in no real danger, but the insults involved in the threats should be resented by every loyal American.

WATCH YOUR MUSSELS.

On the Pacific coast it is contrary to law to eat mussels at certain seasons of the year. This law arose from an outbreak of mussel poisoning in which 102 persons were made sick and six died. The California state board of health watches the mussels grown in waters near San Francisco and informs the people when they can be gathered, marketed, and eaten; and when they are forbidden.

During the last four years there has been continuous study to discover why mussels become poisonous, and at first it was thought that it might be due to feeding on sewage. It was proved that this was not the cause. Mussels in California do not live and grow in places where the water is polluted by sewage. In addition, mussel poisoning in human beings has none of the characteristics of a polluted water disease. Since mussels, oysters, clams, and shellfish generally have the power of picking up and storing harmful chemicals, tests have been made to determine if the food was made poisonous by reason of hydrocyanic acid, oils, and other chemicals. The evidence was negative.

The proof seems conclusive that the poison is generated by the fish. Most fish produce a small amount of poison and some are definitely poisonous to human beings. Most of the poison is carried in the skin as a rule.

Pacific coast mussels and clams were found to carry a small dose of poison at all times, but the amount is far below the level where it is capable of harming human beings. It is at the spawning season that this poison accumulates in mussels until it reaches a concentration where the fish can no longer be eaten with safety. On that coast mussels spawn twice a year—once in winter and once in summer. In certain sections the spawning season is different.

Dr. K. F. Meyer says that an experienced person can pick a poisonous mussel by its appearance. The digestive organs are greenish in color, and either lighter or darker in shade than is a safe mussel. However, rather than follow this method all persons should be guided by the advice and the rules of the health department. Further research may discover a method of making mussels safe regardless of season, but the only proper plan is to follow the direction of the health department.

HARD WORKING MILKMAN.

C. N. S. writes: My husband is 5 feet 10 inches high and weighs 224 pounds. He is a milkman and is 38 years old. When he returns from work his clothes are wet with perspiration. Wearing wet clothes gives him a rheumatism. The excessive sweating causes a rash under his arms. I have a hot bath ready for him when he comes home from work. His habits are good. He drinks coffee or milk.

1. Why does he sweat so?
2. What can be done about it?
3. Should he have a cold bath instead of a warm one?
4. Is coffee harmful?
5. What can be done for the eruption under his arms?

REPLY.

1. His obesity is a factor. His work, another. However, he should be examined for diabetes and for some organic diseases.
2. If he has no disease to explain the excess sweating there is not much that can be done except he be willing to reduce his weight considerably. This can usually be done with diet.
3. A cold bath would be better. It would cool him faster and tone up his skin.
4. Nothing you write indicates that coffee is harming him.
5. Treat it as you would treat rash in a baby. Keep the armpits as dry as possible. Avoid keeping the sopping wet garments in contact with the skin. Apply a good dusting powder freely and often.

LOOSE COVER RATTLES.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you please have the proper city department look after the rattling of a loose manhole cover in front of our house? This is the block east of the Drake hotel and the taxis for the hotel, as well as other cars, all seem to drive over this loose manhole cover. It rattles so loudly that it wakens us from sleep.

R. H. L.

Report is made that noise complained of is caused by a loose manhole cover belonging to the Commonwealth Edison company. This company has been notified and condition will be corrected by them without delay.

WORK IN PROGRESS.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—[Friend of the People.]—Some time ago I read in the papers that they are planning a wide boulevard to run on 1st avenue in North Riverside. Can you give me any information on this?

J. V.

First avenue is being built from a point just south of 28th street along a reverse curve through the forest preserve, to run south along the east side of the zoo and continue on to Joliet road. The bridge over Salt creek has been completed and a good deal of the contract is under way.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. By Sid.

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR Wake-Line: Back in 1897 I visited Chicago and wrote this back home to my "mama":

"Friday evening we went to an entertainment. It was kinetoscope views. This is Edison's latest invention and is something like magic lantern pictures only they are in motion. In some the trains were in motion and looked so real that the children were frightened; in others you saw streets with bicycles, street cars and people moving; in others soldiers and cavalry all walking or riding as natural as life; in others water in Yellowstone park in motion. It is a very wonderful invention, for it looks very real."

MAID OF THE VILLAGE NEAR DUBUQUE.

We kids on the west side, back in 1881, played "tick tack" by hitting gently on a window pane with a stone, then dropped a fair sized piece of glass on the window sill with enough force to break the glass we dropped, and O the fun we had to see the lamps and lanterns appear looking for the broken window light.

One night we tried this on some newcomers in the neighborhood who had moved into Walnut street near Ashland. The whole family got out of bed, lighted lamps and lanterns and went all over the house looking for the broken window. This pleased us so much that we repeated the next night, but the head of the house "laid" for us with a buggy whip and what he did to us was just too bad.

BEN W. ALPINER.

I, too, was a pupil in the old Dearborn school before the great Chicago fire of 1871. I was about 7 years old and in second reader. I have a very clear recollection of my teacher there, a Miss Jenkins—"a very kind, modest, dignified and beautiful young lady from the east." I also remember an incident of a reading lesson about the leopard whose beautiful stripes ran around his body under his belly. At the top of the story were select words to be spelled. In calling the words, the teacher skipped the word "belly," whereupon a sharp-faced Irish lad called out, "Teacher, you missed the word belly." She said, "How dare you speak without permission? You stay in after school."

W. C. WILLIAMS.

MOON MAID.

Sweet maid, I saw you in the moon tonight,
Your gold-brown tresses gracefully were draped
Just over shoulders fair, and silver light
Has made your fine Greek head so clearly shaped.

Your deep blue eyes, and full of purity,
Shone forth their loyalty with one big smile
And told of life of noblest quality
That suffered much but has not known defile.

Your lovely tinted cheeks so smooth and soft
Gave perfect poise to cherry lips so sweet,
And tears stood in my eyes which gazed aloft
In prayer as lips of mine did press to meet.

O, Maid in Moon! Your love is all divine.
It is so pure, pray let your love be mine.

BERTRAM DAY.

SOLDIERS' FIELD TONIGHT WILL be the scene of the second annual Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and newspapers of the middle west. Never before, we dare say, has a program of such wide diversification been offered. There is appeal to lovers of classical music, and to those of us addicted to the so-called "popular" type. But all that is told more fully elsewhere. Our question is whether it is more advisable to hear this program from W-G-N radio station at home or to brave what is expected to be a record-breaking crowd of 150,000 persons.

Before making decision, all you of Chicagoland able to attend, it is necessary to bear in mind that this is not an "ear" show solely. It is an "eye" show as well. Only by being present in person can one view the many spectacular features, the pageantry and the fireworks. That is why we'll be among the 150,000 persons present at Soldiers' field tonight.

IT GETS THEIR "GOAT."

HTW: A Chicago lady seeking divorce complained to the court that her husband took the family goat out riding in the family automobile instead of her. Well, it can at least be said for the goat that it wouldn't attempt any back-seat driving.

NO, READERS, NARY A WORD, not even a postcard, from R. H. L., usual tenant of this column. That probably indicates he is having a pleasant vacation up in Canada, but we had rather expected greetings on a viewcard with the original inscription in his own handwriting, "Having a good time. Wish you were here."

BUT WHY BRING THAT UP?

Wake-Line: I note the press is making much of the recent uptrend in the retail shoe business, factories running at capacity and all that sort of thing. I don't see anything particularly startling about that with so many people walking the streets.

TRY HER ON THE MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Harve: The G. F. and I went to the Philharmonic orchestra last Sunday nite and when the musicians were gathered together all ready to start, she turned to me and said demurely, "But I thought this was going to be a harmonica orchestra," and obviously she was disappointed during the whole performance.

SOL.

NOT ONE OF OUR WAKE PALS.

Sir: Regarding your recent article on athletic coaches and sports, let me say that nevertheless, as viewed by a sensible person, all football players, baseball players, race horse fanatics, prize fighters, and sports-minded persons, either as participants or spectators, are morons, and more or less simple minded. It is a waste of human energy and man power. If the gambling opportunity were taken out of these so-called sports they would soon come to an end.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 22, 1915.

ROME.—Italy declared war on Turkey today. This action followed the refusal of the Ottoman empire to submit to demands in the ultimatum handed to it by Italy, the time limit on which has expired. Naby Bey, the Turkish ambassador to Rome, was handed his passports and he departed immediately for Switzerland. It is confidently expected here that the action of Italy will be followed by similar moves by several of the Balkan states.

BERLIN.—Two Russian gunboats, the Sivutch and Koriets, and one Russian torpedo boat were sunk and one other torpedo boat and a large warship were damaged in a naval battle in the Gulf of Riga, the admiralty announced. The Germans lost one torpedo boat and two German destroyers were damaged. One was beached and the second escorted to port.

WASHINGTON.—Reasonable doubt as to conditions surrounding the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic has decided the Washington government to proceed with deliberation in its purpose to fix responsibility for the loss of at least two American lives and the jeopardizing of a score of others. Therefore Germany will be given an opportunity to explain this last sea tragedy and, if possible, to show whether conditions justified the German submarine commander in sinking the liner in apparent disregard of the solemn protest of the United States against the destruction of merchant vessels bearing American passengers without proper warning and opportunity for succor.

ELGIN, Ill.—Three American automobiles today outclassed the best cars of the foreign makers in a smashing race which was won by Gilbert Anderson, with Earl Cooper coming in second and Eddie O'Donnell third. Anderson averaged 77.25 miles per hour over a course of 301 miles.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 22, 1901.

PARIS.—It is officially announced that M. Constans, French ambassador at Constantinople, has broken off all relations with the Porte. As a consequence of the rupture with Turkey the cruiser Cassard has left Toulon for Turkish waters and will be followed by four other warships. It is claimed by Constans that the sultan broke his promise to settle the disputed French claims.

NEW YORK.—Sir Thomas Lipton, smiling and bubbling over with enthusiasm over his new yacht Shamrock II., arrived here on the Teutonic. All the craft in the channel saluted the yachtsman as the Teutonic came up the bay. Sir Thomas declares his present boat is much faster than the first challenger and that he expects to lift the America's cup.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil magnate, is about to take unto himself a new wife. Having induced the legislature of Florida to pass a law by which he could secure a divorce from his insane wife, and having procured the desired decree, Mr. Flagler will be married day after tomorrow to Miss Mary Lily Kenan of Wilmington and the ceremony will take place at Kenansville in Dupin county. Miss Kenan is 36 years old and a woman of rare culture.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 22, 1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It has been a very anxious day at the White House and it is difficult to find any reason upon which to base a hope for President Garfield. There are some who talk lightly of the new symptom which appeared this evening—vomiting—which has made it necessary once more to discontinue the use of food by the natural method, but the attending surgeons do not treat the matter lightly. One of them, whose name is rarely mentioned in the public prints, and whose medical reputation and experience surpass those of all the rest, said sadly to a friend that the case was very, very critical.

CHICAGO.—The dry goods clerks held a meeting at 25 East Washington street with the president, J. Ingenthran, in the chair. A constitution and by-laws were read and adopted. The one great object at present sought by the association is to have the clerks' hours of labor shortened. They plan a general move to have all dry goods stores closed at 6 p. m.

THE OLD BOATS.

Manitowoc, Wis., Aug. 16.—Replying to Mr. George Timkin will say the old boats are about all gone. The steamer Corona burned at Tonawanda, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1898. Steamer Muskegon was dismantled and beached at Manitowoc in 1905. Steamer Sheboygan dismantled and set on fire and beached at Manitowoc, 1914. Steamer Chicago dismantled and beached at Manitowoc, 1921. Steamer Depere lost on Lake Michigan in 1902. Steamer Atlanta burned on lake south of Sheboygan March 18, 1906. Steamer Iowa crushed by ice two miles off Chicago, Feb. 4, 1915. Steamer Georgia dismantled at Sturgeon Bay, 1928. Steamer Arizona condemned, lying at Manitowoc. Steamer Indiana condemned, but is being used as a boarding house and machine shop in the Soo river by contractors who are deepening the the Soo river. I was captain of all of the above steamers some time in their career. Steamer Nyack burned Jan. 30, 1915, at Muskegon, Mich. Steamer Chicora foundered on Lake Michigan Jan. 21, 1895. Steamer City of Kalamazoo burned at Manistee, Mich., 1911. I could mention hundreds of other old boats that are gone, but space will not permit.

EDWARD CARUS.

MORE OLD BOATS.

Kenilworth, Ill., Aug. 15.—I read the "Voice of the People" every day and I must say it is very interesting.

In reply to George Timkin on "The Old Boats," may I inform him that the Nyack is also lying in the "bone-yard" at Sturgeon Bay, Wis.? She was rebuilt about 1919, but never had the machinery installed and has not seen a day's service since that date.

Probably Mr. Timkin recalls the Wisconsin. She was converted into a barge, but has not seen much service since about 1921 or 1922. She is in Marinette, Wis. Do you remember the schooner Mary Ellen Cook, a beautiful sailing vessel? She once jumped the breakwall outside of Chicago in a heavy blow. She also is comfortably bedded at the "Cove" in Sturgeon Bay.

ARTHUR W. LEAF.

STEAMBOAT FANS.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—I was much pleased to find another steamboat fan in Mr. George Timkin, whose letter appeared in "The Voice of the People" August 15. If on one of his rambles he will visit the south end of Milwaukee harbor he will find the old City of South Haven tied up there. Her present name is E. G. Crosby and she was last in service between Milwaukee and Muskegon. Way out on Puget sound two other old Lake Michigan boats can be found still in active service, S. S. Indianapolis, which was on the Michigan City run just before the Roosevelt was built, and S. S. Iroquois, which carried many a load of happy excursionists to South Haven in the years just following the world war. The Indianapolis is now on the Seattle-Tacoma run; the Iroquois on the Seattle-Victoria run.

No doubt Mr. Timkin has seen the Arizona and Indiana, two popular side-wheel boats of yesteryear, spending a graceful old age tied up in the river at Manitowoc.

S. S. Petosky, on the lakes since 1910, is now in freight service between Chicago and Wisconsin ports. It would be interesting to know what became of her sister ships, S. S. H. D. Williams and City of Kalamazoo. Also the Argo and Soo City.

Does Mr. Timkin's memory go back to the first real greyhounds of the lakes, Northland and Northwest? One burned at her docks in Buffalo during the closed season, and the other is now the Canadian freighter Maplecourt.

WILLIAM WISSENBACH.

THE ROTARIAN.

Forest Park, Ill., Aug. 15.—It might interest George Timkin to know that the old Rotarian, former Democratic headquarters, now sunk in the river, formerly plied the St. Louis river, west and north from Duluth, being the principal means of transportation in that country. I believe that was forty or fifty years ago. What an ending!

C. L. L.

CARELESS PILOTS.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—News of airplane accidents is getting more common. I believe it is due to deliberate carelessness on the part of pilots. Last summer at the opening of the Milwaukee airport the passenger planes took off in a spectacular and very dangerous manner. Last week I saw what appeared to be a three engine all metal passenger plane stunting at a dangerously low altitude over Wheaton. Flying in Europe last summer, I was struck by the much more conservative flying of the European transport pilots.

R. M.

A CIVILIAN OFFICER'S VIEW.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 18.—Have just read your editorial, "Japan and Our Peace Efforts," in today's issue. As a voter and a peace loving citizen, may I offer you my hearty applause? Your straightforwardness makes THE TRIBUNE the leading paper not only in Illinois, but in Wisconsin as well.

Had you given any serious thought to mailing out a uniform blank to all your readers, to be filled in and mailed to our congressmen, requesting their vote for an increase in our military and naval establishments? I think every reserve officer, guardsman, and R. O. T. C. student, as well as Legionnaires, V. F. W.'s and other patriotic organization members, will coöperate.

And, while you are about it, why not include in the requests a demand for increased pay throughout the service? It would not affect me, as I am a civilian officer; but I know many able men who are devoting their lives to the interest of national defense and getting almost nothing to live on. Come on! Get out your request blanks.

Doris Blake Advises Girls Affairs of Heart and Home

Playing With Fire

By WILLIAM MAC LEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Dr. Doris Silver, a dude ranch guest, is rescued from a runaway horse by a handsome stranger, much to the annoyance of her companion, Ranse Brennan. The stranger tells Lee Reynolds, owner of the dude ranch, and fixes a flat tire on her car. She hires him to help on the Lazy R ranch. When she notifies Brennan, who is her foreman, his resentment infuriates her and she discharges him. When his threats fail to frighten her he forces his embraces on her. She reaches for a gun, which accidentally explodes and wounds him slightly. The new hand saves Lee from further trouble with Brennan. Dune Daggett, an old ranch helper, recognizes the stranger as the son of a former friend.

INSTALLMENT VI.

PLAYING A LONE HAND.

"I'm not trying to fool Miss Lee. But I've got reasons for not telling everyone I'm Jack Hadley."

"You in trouble, son?"

"No. A man died in a Los Angeles hospital the other day. Just before he passed out his mind got to wandering. He told about my father's death."

The old man drew a plug of tobacco from his hip pocket and cut off a chew. His eyes gleamed savagely. He had personal reasons for interest in the subject. "What did this fellow say? Was he one of the bunch of lousy coyotes that did it?"

"Yes. It was on his conscience. He was a renegade serving with Francisco. It got him to see an American lined up and shot, but he daren't let on he'd a yeller. The point of his story is that the man who led the outlaws to the mine used to work for my father and is now living on a ranch near Spring River."

Daggett spat at a flat stone and made a center shot. "Dog my cats! Who is this bird? An' where does he live? At which ranch?"

"Don't know. When this sick man began to talk the nurse thought his mind was wandering. She didn't pay any attention until he mentioned my father's name. She's a friend of our family. The man died without repeating the name of the betrayer. She says it was an American name, not Mexican."

"Would she know it again if she heard it?"

"She thought so."

"Hmp! Worked for yore dad, he said. Quite a lot of scalawags did that, of us. So that's why you're here—to find this lousy hobo?"

"That's why I'm here."

The old timer looked at him curiously. In this young fellow's quiet manner was a threat more deadly than bluster.

"Count me in, son, long as there's a button on Jake's coat," Daggett said.

"No. I'm playing a lone hand. All you can do is give me information. You've been here a long time—know everybody in the Spring River country?"

"All the old-timers. Yep, I drifted here to the Lazy R right soon after what happened at the mine. Been here ever since, first with her pappy Lee Reynolds an' then with the li'l boss."

"I'll want to check up on the whole list." Abruptly the man tossed a question at his companion. "What do you know about this fellow Ranse Brennan?"

"I know he's mean an' ugly as galvanized sin." The startled eyes of Daggett sought those of the man in chaps. "You ain't suspectin' Brennan, are you?"

Had a scar above the left eye.

"I suspect every possibility till he ceases to be one. What about his past?"

"He came here soon after I did. I ain't got any medicine on his past. Ranse don't talk about it. But he ain't yore man. He can't be. It ain't reasonable that I'd spend fifteen years with a fellow who helped kill my best friend and left me for dead without me gettin' hep to him."

"Why? It took place after dark. You couldn't identify the murderers, could you?"

"No—except one, maybe. He was a Mexican. Had a scar above the left eye. He was the one put me out when the attack first started. There was a full moon."

"I know that. I was there."

"Sure enough. You an' yore dad an' Big Bill an' me. I always figured it was some of the Mexicans workin' at the mine betrayed us to that devil Francisco. An' it was a white man, by this fellow in the hospital's story?"

"Yes. This outlaw Megares was a lieutenant of Francisco at that time, wasn't he? Did you ever hear whether he was in that raid?"

"No. May be so he was, maybe not. Those fellows were always scatterin' or coming together again. Son, I'll never forget that night, an' I don't reckon you will."

"Never."

The young man looked grimly across the saffron-hued desert to the porphyry mountains. He did not see the shriveled greasewood, the parched mesquite, the gray-green cholla, nor did he see the silvery sheen of the sun rays shimmering over them.

What he saw was the stark setting of that red tragedy which many years ago had leaped out of the night and changed his life.

The mine lay far up in the Sierras. Jack Hadley was resident manager, and at this time he was working only a small force, all natives except Daggett and Big Bill. Hadley's motherless little boy was with him.

That little boy, now a full sized man, still remembered fragments of the night in the cabin before he fell asleep.

Daggett had rambled on in his garrulous fashion, discussing a projected ranch through the hills. Big Bill, who had just returned with the monthly pay roll for the men, had heard there was a party of surveyors in the mountains.

"Don't get excited, Bill, about that railroad," Daggett advised. "I got all het up about one coming into Ajo twenty years ago an' most rode a mustang to death to beat it into town an' buy me some lots. It ain't there yet, nor liable to be. A railroad ain't ever been built till you see the choo-choo cars running."

Hadley rose, walked over to the bunk where his small son lay, and looked him in. "Sleep tight, Jack," he said, with a warm smile which promised love and protection, the smile that within a few minutes was to be blotted out forever.

The eyes of the boy drooped. He fell asleep.

And awoke to the sound of crashing guns. Daggett was sinking down over the bunk, smothering him where he lay. He caught a glimpse of Ranse Brennan charging at his father, who stood in the center of the room with a smoking revolver in his hand.

It seemed forever to the small boy before he could burrow out from under the body of the man pinning him down. He heard voices outside the house. He worked to free himself. One was harsh and dominant, the brutal voice he learned later] of Francisco, the outlaw chief. The other was that of his host, quiet and steady.

"No. You keel my men, two of them. You tell me lies—lies, Meester Hadley. You say this is all the money your man bring. I do not believe, but if so you are sairtainly onlucky." The man interrupted himself with a coarse laugh. "You have thirty seconds, Meester Gringo. Where iss that money?"

"You have it all. Figure it out, you fool. We are working thirty-five men. If you multiply——"

"Pouf! You beeg man there. Can you talk?"

Big Bill let out a cry of rage cut short by the roar of guns.

When little Jack Hadley crept out of the cabin the raiders had gone. He found the riddled bodies of Big Bill and his father.

. . . . . .

Ranse Brennan straddled to the horse Kansas had run up and saddled for him. The animal was a square-built, short-backed bay with a deep barrel and wide.

"He ain't hurt much," Dune volunteered, watching him.

"No," agreed young Hadley, and added: "If he's not a crook he's got the earmarks of one."

"I never liked him, not from the first. Always knew there was something shady about him. I'll bet he's swung many a wide loop in his day."

"Mebbe. Soon as I saw him this morning I felt hostile. Hated him from the start. Why?"

Daggett did not answer the question. He was watching the ex-foreman. "See how he forks that bronc, boy, draggin' savage at the bit an' drivin' his spurs. He's mean, I tell you. Never did treat a horse right . . . By Jove, Tequila is sure enough pitching."

The old-timer's voice grew squeaky with excitement. "Didn't I tell you what he'd do? See him kick Tequila in the belly. I wisht that barrel-bodied hombre would kick his lights out. Here he comes. Look out."

The last words were a shout of warning. In the saddle once more, Brennan, with a snap of purple rage, caught sight of Hadley's scoffing face. The horse plunged forward. With a jerk of the rein he guided the animal straight at the cowpuncher.

Dune ducked, just in time. In a cloud of dust horse and rider swept past at a gallop and dashed down the road.

"I'll stop and run you down," Dune screamed.

"You missed it," returned Hadley evenly, his hard eyes on the diminishing figure of Brennan. "I think I've found the man I'm looking for, Dune."

John Gilbert Baffles Police to Clear Name

By Roberta Nangle.

Since John Gilbert's employers have to pay him a tremendous salary on a contract, you can hardly blame them for wanting to give him something to do. They might, however, find something better for the one-time great lover of the screen than his latest vehicle, "The Phantom of Paris."

The picture, taken from a French thriller, "Cheri-Bibi," is a limp mixture of magic, mystery, murder, and romance. Mr. Gilbert plays Bibi, a handsome magician who Houdinis his way out of handcuffs and iron bars. Cecile, blonde daughter of a French aristocrat, is in love with the magician and plans to marry him against her father's wishes.

Bibi visits the father to inform him that he'll wed the daughter whether the father likes it or not. A few minutes later the father is murdered, with all signs pointing to Bibi as the guilty one. The dirty deed was done by another suitor, but Bibi is imprisoned for the crime, and Cecile weds the other man.

Being a magician, Bibi doesn't stay in jail very long, and the rest of the picture shows him doing a long disappearing act on the French police until he finally steps forth to right matters by employing a trick that's weird, complicated, and unbelievable.

Mr. Gilbert gives a satisfactory performance as the magician, but the glamour he used to radiate on the old silent screen is missing. His voice has improved considerably, but he seems a bit conscious of the microphone. Leila Hyams, Lewis Stone, and Natalie Moorhead do their respective bits neatly but not convincingly.

"BROADMINDED."
Produced by Warner Brothers.
Directed by Mervyn Le Roy.
Presented at the Orpheum theater.
THE CAST.

Osaie Simpson	Joe E. Brown
Constance	Ona Munson
Jack Hackett	William Collier Jr.
Penelope	Marjorie White
Mabel Robinson	Margaret Livingston
Gertie Gardner	Thelma Todd
Aunt Polly	Grace Hampden
Pancho	Bella Lugosi

"Broadminded," starring the wide mouthed comedian, Joe E. Brown, would be easier to take if it had been condensed into a two reeler. [Some people would say it never should have been attempted at all.] A little bit of Mr. Brown's simple comedy is all right in its place, but too much of it is too much.

This time he is featured in a picture that apparently "just grew" like Topsy. The action is dragged out to fill the prescribed length of time for an average movie and to give the comedian ample opportunity to strut his not very subtle stuff. It is funny at only rare moments, and most of the laugh provoking efforts are hollow and forced.

William Collier Jr. also is featured in the cast as a lightweight boy much enamored of the ladies. Ona Munson, Marjorie White, Thelma Todd and Margaret Livingston lend feminine support. Of these four, Miss White and the pulchritudinous Miss Todd give the better performances.

The estate was valued at $60,000. Officials found silver and gold coins and currency secreted behind pictures, under rugs and in a score of other hiding places soon after Stroedter's death.

Paris Yankee Church Leads in Variety of Money Collected

PARIS, Aug. 21.—A world's record for diversity in the coins and banknotes found in the collection plate is claimed by the American church of Paris, which is to dedicate its $1,000,000 edifice next September.

Recently money of fourteen nations, also gold, silver, copper, bronze, and paper were represented in the offering.

Most of the collection consists of French money, from coppers up to thousand franc notes. Five franc notes—about 5 cents—are in the great majority; ten franc notes are next, while hundred franc notes are fairly numerous. Every time John D. Rockfeller Jr. attends this church it has been remarked that a thousand franc note is found in the collection plate. Incidentally he gave $100,000 for the new edifice.

Many American coppers find their way to the collection plate in Paris; also nickels, dimes, quarters, and dollar bills.

Belgian banknotes are frequent; also those from England, Italy, Switzerland, and Germany. Less frequent are the currencies of Sweden, Bulgaria, and Portugal. The explanation, of course, is simply that American tourists, on going to church in Paris, decide to get rid of all their foreign small change, and the American church is the beneficiary.

'Cat's 9 Lives' Probably Due to Brain Phone

Science Transmits Words by Feline Wires.

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Existence in a cat's brain of a telephone central operating by minute natural electrical currents has been found at Harvard Medical school.

The discovery is described today in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, by H. Davis and L. J. Saul of the department of physiology and psychiatry.

They confirmed and developed a discovery made about a year ago at Princeton that by talking into a live cat's ear suitably hooked up to a highly sensitive telephone circuit human speech can be transmitted clearly over the nerves of hearing, through the cat's brain and out along metal wires terminating in a phone ear piece.

They found that in addition to the nerves of hearing operating electrically like a telephone line, there also are certain areas in the brain close to the auditory nerves which transmit sound.

These adjacent systems correspond roughly to the side systems of a telephone exchange. They might also be described loosely as side bands of some sort. In the Harvard experiments these side areas did not transmit as well as the auditory nerve itself.

"Intensity, timbre, and pitch [up to at least 1,000 per second] of the sounds applied to the ears of the cat," say Davis and Saul, "were reproduced with considerable accuracy in the ear phones.

"Words always are reproduced more clearly and intelligibly from the nerve. Those from the brain stem, while often intelligible, always are somewhat blurred."

After death the nerves of hearing remain alive sometimes for several minutes, at least to the extent of continuing to transmit sound. But some other areas cease transmission with the last heart beat, and sometimes stop several minutes before death.

Another new finding is the effect of narcotics, which decrease the "size" of the sounds. In some instances narcotics stop the sound transmission altogether for several hours. Novocaine was the narcotic, being applied directly to parts of the brain.

The report says the experiments demonstrate the possibility of direct study of the activity of individual tracts within the central nervous system. This system comprises the nerves that control the conscious movements.

YOUNG GIRLS' SMILES WIN THEM FORTUNE LEFT BY AGED IOWAN

Delhi, Ia., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Six girls living here know today that it pays to be kind to the aged. For several years Roberta Barker, 18; Ruby Green, 14; Lee Fisher, 16; Artis Carroll, 10; Louise White, 8, and Helen Pulver, 16, greeted William D. Herrick, wealthy recluse, with smiles whenever they met him, and on Christmas they always remembered him with a greeting card.

Mr. Herrick, who was 82, died a few days ago, and when his will was read today the girls learned they had become owners of most of his property, which consisted of dwelling houses, business houses, and city lots. Some of the property was given to the city schools. Mr. Herrick died within thirty minutes after he had made his will last week. He had no relatives.

British Bestow Medals for Doctors' Degree During World War

A group of American surgeons who served as officers in a hospital unit in the British army organized in the spring of 1915 by the late Dr. John B. Murphy have received British war medals for their service. Of the 32 surgeons, 15 originally were from Chicago. Of that number six now live here.

They are: Dr. George G. Davis, who served as lieutenant-colonel under the late Col. James Neff; Dr. George E. Meyer, who was a major; Dr. Fred W. Moeller, Dr. D. F. Hayes, Dr. Sidney Walker Jr., and Dr. John G. O'Malley.

The medals, issued by the British government, were sent to the individual surgeons from the adjutant general's office by order of the secretary of war and were received by the doctors yesterday and Thursday.

Medals await the 75 nurses who served with the unit, but their present addresses are not known, Dr. Meyer explained. He asked that all nurses who served with the John B. Murphy unit submit their names and addresses to him at 30 North Michigan avenue.

The torture devices were to be shown at the fair in an international national Chinese exhibit.

YOUNGEST OF BRITISH ROYALTY CELEBRATES, SHE'S ONE YEAR OLD

GLAMIS, Scotland, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The baby of the British royal family, Princess Margaret Rose, saw her first birthday celebrated today by an admiring circle of relatives.

She shared the congratulations of the occasion with Gerald Lascelles, younger son of Princess Mary, who was seven years old today.

The parents of the little princess, the duke and duchess of York, her five year old sister, Princess Elizabeth, and her nurse did the honors in Glamis castle. They greeted her around a huge birthday cake whose only adornment was a candle set in a pink sugar rose.

Of all the presents she received Baby Margaret seemed to prefer the one from Princess "Lily Bet." It was a "cuddly" animal which her sister bought out of her own spending money because she liked it so well herself.

Princess Mary was born in Glamis castle a year ago, the fourth child of the duke and duchess. Although she was underweight at birth she has grown stronger as the months passed. She resembles her mother—with a heart shaped face, chestnut hair and wide set blue eyes.

Yankee War Secretary Gets Chopstick Test

Mrs. Hurley Proves Far More Efficient.

TOKIO, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Secretary of War Hurley doesn't know his chopsticks as Mrs. Hurley does.

The secretary was completely outclassed by his wife in use of the eating implements here tonight at an informal Japanese style dinner given in their honor by the American ambassador, W. Cameron Forbes.

Mrs. Hurley lived in Tokio as a girl when her father was an embassy naval attaché. She spurned the use of a fork. Her husband did not.

The Hurleys took off their shoes and sat on the floor and thoroughly enjoyed the dancing of geisha girls between courses.

The secretary and his wife arrived in Tokio this morning. Mr. Hurley made a courtesy call on Foreign Minister Shidehara. Then he went sightseeing and attended a luncheon as the guest of Minister of War Minami. Other guests included Ambassador Forbes and others.

Mrs. Hurley was the luncheon guest of Mrs. James Russel, cousin of Ambassador Forbes and hostess at the American embassy.

Tonight the Hurleys left for Kyoto. There tomorrow they will be guests of the commanding general of the sixteenth division. Later they will go to Kobe and board the President Cleveland to continue their journey to the Philippines. There Secretary Hurley will make a tour of inspection.

Nancy Carroll Here with Eugenie Hat; 'Life Is Wonderful

Nancy Carroll tilted her pretty red head upon which perched a brand new Eugenie hat, and said as she stepped off the Twentieth Century Limited of the New York Central, yesterday, that "life is just full of everything wonderful."

Possibly the presence at her side of her new husband, Bolton Mallory, managing editor of Life, had something to do with the small motion picture's actress's philosophic outlook on life. She went on confidently to her inquisitor:

"If you just wait long enough you are certain to have your dreams fulfilled. If I hadn't worked hard in the movies and won out, I'm certain I never would have met Mr. Mallory."

Miss Carroll was on her way to Hollywood, and at the Dearborn station bade goodbye to Mallory who hastened back to his work in the east.

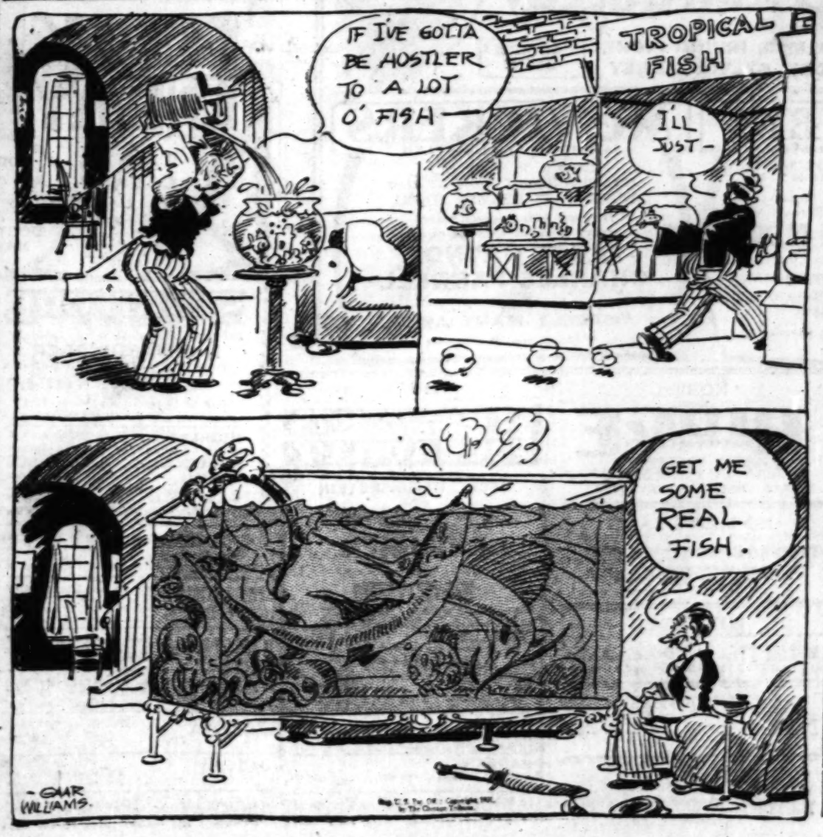
SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS



Proper Amount of Eye Shadow Gives Touch of Mystery

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Whether it was the back-of-the-head hat that called for eye cosmetics, or whether it was the cosmetic business pouncing down at a psychological moment with their eye-beautifying wares, I don't know. But the place of eye shadow and eye cosmetics in general has taken on an amazing stride in the last year.

Eyelids and lashes are being colored that never before knew a cosmetic. And from all the signs, we're only just beginning to look at eye cosmetics as a means to a flattering end. Pretty soon, one might forecast, the American girl will be like her French sister. She'd sooner think of going out to shop without her frock on than without her eye cosmetics.

In case you might be wondering what shades you could choose from if you took it into your head today to dress up your eyelid—there is a purple shade that is said to be most seductive for night wear. The blues are on a gray-blue order, a deeper shade, also and a very young, soft blue that is charming on the right person.

Grays there are, too—lending depth to the gray eye and on certain of the green eyed giving just that touch of mystery that spells disaster for the poor male who stops to look.

But what I really started out to say was that there isn't much conquest in store for eyelids that have become flabby and wrinkled, though they may be loaded with cosmetics. And isn't it curious how many times you see that old and wizened lid in company with facial skin that has been beautifully preserved. You see this more often than you see withered hands and a young silhouette and face.

Most women, when they oil the face with creams and preservative lotions, shy clear of the eyelid region. The skin there needs nourishment and tonic just as well as that of the rest of the face. The attention being paid to eye cosmetics naturally will bring about a reform in general eyelid condition.

FARM AND GARDEN

WEST PARKS GROW LILIES.

Water lilies which visitors to Chicago have announced are among the best in the country are attracting gardeners throughout the Chicago area to Garfield park to Douglas park. In the former area there are two large pools 90 by 160 feet and in Douglas park there is a single large pool, each containing various types of the outstanding and new water lilies.

Chief Florist August Koch has developed hybrid lilies that have been named after persons identified with the development of the park system. A large blue lily has been named the Gov. Emmerson; a huge deep pink water lily is named after Mrs. W. R. James, wife of President James of the west parks commission, and there also is one known as pink pearl and another white lily called the Chicago.

Wider interest has developed in water lilies in the last three years through the growth in interest and construction of small water pools to enhance the exterior of homes. Aquatic plants as a result have proven popular and their culture is being studied widely by club leaders and the amateur home gardeners. Mr. Koch has issued an invitation to the public to visit the pools in the parks as an educational project.

Hortense Henry Is Engaged to Gordon Kelley

BY THALIA

MR. AND MRS. HUNTINGTON B. HENRY of 1500 Lake Shore drive and Lake Forest announce the engagement of their daughter, Hortense, to Gordon Phelps Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley of 1550 State parkway and Lake Forest.

The engagement is formally announced today, on Miss Henry's birthday, but there's to be no announcement party to divulge the interesting news because—well, it isn't really a secret. Miss Henry's and Mr. Kelley's friends have been expecting the engagement all summer.

Miss Henry is a graduate of Farmington and studied for a year at Mlle. Lafontaine's in Paris. She made her debut at a garden reception given by her parents and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift, at the latter's Lake Forest state, Sagamore hill, last September.

Mr. Kelley went to the Berkshire prep school and in 1927 embarked on a long and adventuresome trip around the world. Extensive travels in South America and a session of big game hunting in Africa were among the exciting features of the trip. He owns and flies his own plane, a beautiful Laird that is the finest sort of job out at Palwaukee airport and has a top speed of 160 miles an hour. His other distinctions include the fact that he is acquainted with Gene Tunney and entertained that prize celebrity when he was in College several years ago.

The wedding is to take place some time this winter, but the date hasn't been set yet.

The show will be one of the most colorful because the competitors are all blue ribbon winners in the hunter classes of the South Shore Country club, Lake Forest, Oconomowoc, Racine, Milwaukee, and Fort Sheridan shows.

Exhibitors for the show include Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Samuel Insull, Robert E. Wood, Martin Insull, Mrs. Benjamin Leslie Behr, Mrs. D. Hunt Cummings, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, and Mrs. James Minotto. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson and C. Colston Leigh have reserved parking space. Mrs. Lowell Coyle's Grey Miss won it in 1927, Mrs. R. R. McCormick's Tan King in 1928 and Col. A. E. Pierce's Good Deal last year before last. Proceeds of the show go for the benefit of various recreational and educational activities of the post. Some of the money will be used to build a new chapel to replace the one that burned in the fall.

Aid to Help Settlement of Northwestern University.

The Winnetkas, Glencoe, and Kenilworth members of the Northwestern university settlement board are planning to hold a six day sale at the Aladdin Lamp gift shop in Winnetka for the week of Sept. 21. Proceeds will go to the settlement's fund for the use of needy families.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Darling of Kenilworth and their daughters, Miss Dorothy and Miss Jane Darling, are to depart tomorrow for New York City, and on Wednesday will sail on the S.S. Europa for two months of travel in England and France. In Paris they are to meet Mrs. Darling's brother-in-law and sister, Ambassador John M. Cudahy of Stockholm, Sweden, and Mrs. Morehead, and they will all return to this country together some time in October. Miss Dorothy may be included on the debutante lists for the fall and Miss Jane is to return to her studies at Ogontz.

Field Museum Explorers Find Indians' Sacred Spring

A sacred spring, timbered and cribbed with cedar logs by pre-historic Indians is the latest discovery of the Field Museum Archeological expedition to the southwest. The party is working at the Lowry ruin, near Ackmen, Colo.

At the bottom were found ten pieces of pottery and 40 wooden prayer sticks.

"It would seem that the ruin is quite out of place geographically," writes Dr. Paul S. Martin, head of the expedition, "since it is undoubtedly the work of Chaco canyon people who lived hundreds of miles south and east of this spot in what is now New Mexico.

Eight Women Among Hay Fever Patients Used as Test Cases

Eight women hay fever victims who are among 150 volunteers to aid scientific research by a mass experiment with filtered air in the University of Illinois Research hospital will relieve eight men hay fever victims there this morning.

Authorities conducting the investigation, which is the first on so large a scale to be held in any hospital, it is believed, are only worried for fear the women will not be sneezing and weeping to their utmost.

With the exception of one day the weather has been mild hay fever weather since the inception of hay fever season a week ago, when the experiment began. Yesterday the pollen count on the federal building showed zero, or that there was no pollen in their air in the loop, making some sort of a hay fever season record.

Six of the last eight experimental subjects in the pollen-free ward of the hospital have been permitted to leave the hospital in the daytime to play golf. By the time they had returned in the evening all six were sneezing and weeping, and one or two wheezing with seasonal asthma.

After two or three hours in the pollenless room, however, their symptoms had vanished. Friday night furnished a new experiment. Shortly before midnight one of the hay fever victims whose curiosity was aroused by the air filtering machine from which they obtained their pure air, made investigations.

He accidentally put the machine out of commission, so that the air they breathed was no longer pollenless.

Divorced Wife Has Her Fling and Now Wishes to Return

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Some five years ago I divorced my wife though I loved her dearly then. She wanted the divorce. She was very independent, and liked to remind me that she could make her own living. Well, now she has seen her mistake and would like to come back, and I am puzzled whether to take her or not.

"I had money when I married her, but when I left her I had nothing. Alone I have come back again to myself. I have a nice business, in fact, the second largest in my city and in my line. My folks are against my remarrying her because she wouldn't come back when I was broke, and I wanted her to. They say she just wants to come back now that I have recovered financially. SAM."

Your folk, Sam, know nothing about why the woman wants to come back and give marriage with you another trial. No one knows that but the woman herself. No one knows whether it was just coincidental that you did recover financially as she was trying to work her way back. There was a time there when women were badly obsessed with the "independent bug." The talk hit a lot of women who had no right to listen.

It appeared a simple matter then, when jobs were plenty and money was flowing freely, to get out and earn. It was to many wives an easy way to settle the most trifling domestic quarrel. The independent talk was in the air and, I haven't a doubt, hit a lot of women who were badly prepared for the consequences. The less experienced women were, the more they ranted about getting out and getting a job so they could be independent.

Well, they're not so cocky now. They've learned that working outside of the home is work quite as work inside it is. They learned that ability and experience counted more than a whim to work. Some of them have come traipsing back home voluntarily. Some have been chased back by the depression, and some of those who severed the ties with a divorce are busy regretting.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Food Talk.

Before we enter into a discussion on recipes this morning we want to say "thank you" for all our readers' letters which express such an interest in our department. We regret that there is one service we cannot give you and that is the name of the dealers and wholesalers who stock the various cooking equipment to which we frequently refer. The reason for our being unable to do so is obvious. It is unfair to name certain retail outlets who, we know, are in a position to supply new equipment when there are many other retail concerns undoubtedly carrying the same equipment.

We should suggest, therefore, if you wish to procure any of the articles described in this column from time to time that you get in communication with your neighborhood merchant. In the event he cannot supply you, he will be glad to order the article, or articles, for you.

We will be happy to assist him to the extent of giving him the names of the manufacturers from whom he can purchase the specific equipment required. If he is unfamiliar with the article you desire ordered, ask him to communicate directly with us.

CODFISH BALLS.

1 cup raw salt codfish.
1 egg.
1 pint raw potatoes.
Pinch of pepper.
1 teaspoon butter.

Wash the fish, pick to pieces, and free from all bones. Peel and cut the potatoes into quarters. Put the potatoes and fish into boiling water and cook until the potatoes are soft. Drain well. Mash and beat the potatoes and fish while they are hot until they are light. Add the butter and pepper. When they are slightly cool, add the well beaten egg. Shape into balls and fry in deep fat.

ROAST YOUNG CHICKEN.

Clean a young chicken and split down the back. Remove internal organs and clean thoroughly. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Rub the surface with soft butter, or half lard and half butter. Place in a roasting pan, add ½ cup of water to the pan, taking care you do not pour it on the chicken. Roast in a moderate oven 50 to 60 minutes. Make a pan gravy from the dripping in the roaster. Garnish with parsley or watercress. This method of cooking prevents that dryness so common to fried chicken.

DEVILED TOMATOES.

6 large tomatoes.
6 tablespoons butter.
½ teaspoon onion juice.
1 teaspoon sugar.
1 teaspoon mustard.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 tablespoon vinegar.
2 eggs.

Cut the ends off 6 large ripe tomatoes, slice and fry in 6 tablespoons of butter. Mix and blend other ingredients, put in double boiler and cook for a minute or two. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs just as you take the sauce from the fire. Pour over the tomatoes and serve hot. This serves five people.

FRENCH DRESSING.

5 teaspoons sugar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon mustard.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
⅓ cup vinegar.
1 teaspoon peppery sauce.
1 can tomato soup.
1 large grated onion.
⅔ cup salad oil.

Put all ingredients in a bottle and shake well. Keep in the refrigerator until ready to use.

Childish Skill to Be Displayed at Algonquin

One of the most important days of the whole summer at Camp Algonquin is tomorrow. Then the handiwork of the children who are all summer guests, will be placed on show. Visitors will be welcomed.

All summer the children who went to the camp to regain their health, spent regular hours working on basketry, sewing, manual training, drawing, and other handicrafts. Tomorrow they will stand proudly by while visitors from Chicago and towns surrounding Camp Algonquin praise their work. Then the visitors will inspect the camp and learn how far the superintendent, Mrs. Astrid Save, can stretch a contributor's dollar to make the camp a pleasant vacation land for tenement mothers and children.

"We are always pleased to have visitors," Mrs. Save said yesterday. "But we ask that our well wishers do not come between the hours of 1:30 and 3:30, which is the rest period for the children. The camp is located near Algonquin, Ill., and not far from Cary, and is about forty-five miles from Chicago."

Contributions to both the camp and ice funds continued to be generous yesterday. If gifts continue so, both funds will be able to complete their work in the few weeks left of summer. Ice will be sent to needy homes, and mothers and children in the congested districts may be given the vacations they have been promised.

Yesterday's benefit given by children was a two act costume play at the Earle home, 9620 Hoyne avenue. Eight children put on the show and were pleased when an audience of forty turned out for the production. Those taking part were Betty and Marshall Earle, Daum Castle, Virginia Rice, Carrol Sauer, Ruddy Selma, Charles Ernest, and Bruce Judd.

Remember the Child Is Entitled to Make Mistakes of His Own.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"Sometimes I think it's what we haven't done rather than what we have that has helped our boy the most," said the woman quoted yesterday, you remember.

And we saw the truth of it. But it takes wisdom to know how not to do things. There is an art in letting children alone—in letting them do the growing, the developing, instead of feeling that if we take our hands off they'll grow wrong. On the contrary, if we'd keep our hands off in the right way they more easily grow right.

Some generalizations need to be clarified with an instance. Otherwise some people reading might misunderstand. They might think that by letting children alone we mean neglecting them or forcing them to make all their own decisions. That is not what is meant. Instead here are some examples.

Allow your child to make mistakes. If he's doing a manual job don't tell him each move to make so that the result will be perfect. The doing is more important.

If he's learning to use the telephone or give a message, let him blunder without blame, rather than put it through well because he's prepared with detailed directions from you. In other words, he's entitled to his mistakes.

Don't fill up every minute of his time with chores and orders and lessons of cultural intent, so that he won't get into mischief. Let him have some undisturbed leisure in which to find himself.

Don't bring him into the limelight.

Don't badger him with suggestions for and interruptions to his play.

Don't nag him.

We all know about the sins of omission, but for parents there are the virtues of omission, too.

Cape-Skirt Costume for Summer Beaches

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—In the midst of the welter of beach pajamas that are being worn around the French coast line, the occasional skirted costume for lounging on the sands stands out with distinction.

When a skirt is worn it is treated exactly as if it were trousers, being put on over the one piece bathing suit and worn with the upper part of the suit for a blouse.

Mary Nowitzky, who began the vogue for beach pajamas, is the one who is bringing out beach skirts, and one of her best models is shown in the accompanying sketch. It is a combination skirt and cape and is shown worn both ways.

Nowitzky makes it out of vivid green white, and red hand knitted stuff. It is an oblong of cloth with one long and one short sash end at the top. When worn as a cape these ends are draped as shown—one is thrown over the left shoulder and the other is allowed to fall down in a cascade of cloth in front. When worn as a skirt these sash ends serve to tie the skirt on, for the long end is draped around the waist and tied in a knot to the short end on the left hip.

There's a button and buttonhole about half way down that can be fastened to hold the skirt together, but so far I've never seen any one wearing this skirt bother to button it.

This beach skirt, as Mme. Nowitzky explains, has an advantage over trousers during the sun bath, in that you can use it for protection of the shoulders or the legs, as you will, and thus take your sun tan in various places by alternating the garment from cape to skirt and back again.

BURNING BLAZE 5-2 FAVORITE IN JUVENILE

Colt Faces Greatest Test Today.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Burning Blaze, the sensational 2 year old in the stable of the Nash Brothers of Chicago, will have to be very lucky a champion if he gallops away in the $10,000 added Hawthorne Juvenile stakes this afternoon. Overnight twenty-two were named to the race, which will have a strong bearing on the championship, and in the draw for post positions Burning Blaze did not fare so well.

A slow beginner in all his races, he drew No. 9 position, with most of the good horses in the contest on the inside of him. These include At Arms, Giovanna, Portden, Cathop, Jack Raney, and Porter's Dream. Past performances would indicate that all of them are likely to be leading or Burning Blaze going down the backstretch. Jockey Bill Fronk, under whom he gets Burning Blaze away faster than in all his previous starts, will have to trail for a time and then come up on the outside to win.

Riding New to Burning Blaze.

Trailing on the outside will not be a new experience for Burning Blaze. He raced on the outside all the way when he won the rich Post and Paddock stakes at Arlington and in his final trial for the Hawthorne stakes he raced on the outside to win an overnight handicap affair while carrying 123 pounds, the same weight he will pack this afternoon.

Burning Blaze had backers everywhere last night and was the 5 to 2 favorite. His most popular rival was Reign from the Nevada Stock Farm stable, owned by George Wingfield. The son of Spinard, which ran six furlongs last Tuesday in 1:11 4-5, was 4 to 1 in the betting, and young Al Carman, who trains him, was confident Reign will defeat Burning Blaze and will then go on to the race 3 year old championship. Liberty Limited was the third choice, going at 5 to 1 last night.

Eighteen May Start.

Ed Bauer Raspass entry of Our Boy and Grand Champion from Kentucky ruled the fourth choice at 6 to 1, although there was some spasmodic betting for Cold Check, another Kentucky colt, and it appeared likely he would be at 6 or 7 to 1 at post time.

Every good two year old in the west is named for the stake and from the outright field of 22 it is expected that 18 will go to the post. This will be the biggest field to race at Hawthorne in many years and in size at least it will rival the field for the famous Futurity at Belmont park next month. It is possible the Belmont winner may never be able to beat the colt or filly which triumphs in the Hawthorne this afternoon.

Eleven in Great Lakes.

There is another stake race on the card which closes the summer season at Hawthorne. It is the Great Lakes handicap and has attracted 11 of our best western handicap performers. Gold John, which won the Illinois Derby handicap a week ago, was assigned top weight of 126 pounds, with Jockey Ralph Neves up. Gold John will be ridden by Jockey Jack Westrope, who rode Burning Blaze in his last race.

Hawthorne Gold Cup Race Date Is Shifted to Oct. 8

The Hawthorne Gold Cup, the $25,000 added race that features the fall Hawthorne meeting, will be run on Saturday, Oct. 8, instead of Oct. 10, in order not to conflict with the Notre Dame-Notre Dame charity football game at Soldiers' field, it was announced yesterday.

The Hawthorne management is working out a plan whereby the railroads may offer special rates covering the two day period, bringing in visitors for the famous turf fixture as well as the gridiron feature. A few years back, when the Cubs were in the world's series the Gold Cup race was run on Monday and attracted a tremendous crowd.

The odds for the Hawthorne Juvenile and the Great Lakes handicap, to be run today, follow:

FACES SEVERE TEST

Burning Blaze, the Nash Brothers' crack two year old, winner of the Post and Paddock and one of the leading juveniles of the year, faces its greatest test in the $10,000 Hawthorne Juvenile handicap today. He carries top weight of 123 pounds, starts in No. 9 position, and is a 5 to 2 favorite.

Liberty Limited, entered by the Three D's stable of Texas, undoubtedly will have a multitude of backers, although it was third in the rich Post and Paddock stakes, which went to Burning Blaze. Liberty Limited will carry 120 pounds in the Juvenile today, the closing day's feature at the west side racing course.

KAYE DON'S BOAT REACHES QUEBEC FOR SPEED TRIAL

QUEBEC, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Miss England II., the fastest motorboat in the world, in which Kaye Don set a world speed mark of 110 miles an hour on Lake Garda, Italy, arrived here today aboard the Duchess of Bedford from England.

The speedster is bound for the international speed races at Detroit next month, where Don will drive Miss England II. against Gar Wood's boats in the Harmsworth cup events. Miss England II. will not be unloaded until the Duchess of Bedford reaches Montreal.

Henry Martin, designer and builder of the speedboat, was aboard the liner with the two mechanics who race with Don.

BABE HITS 600TH HOMER; PAYS $10 TO BOY FOR BALL

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Babe Ruth and little Tonny Gallico engaged in a business transaction here today, much to the satisfaction of each.

The Babe hit the 600th home run of his career and was anxious to get the ball, which hit a motor car outside the park.

"I'd give a $10 bill and a new ball to get that old one back," Ruth announced.

Tony arrived before long with the old ball, collected the $10 and the new baseball.

Landis Orders Browns, Brewers to Cancel Deal

Baseball Commissioner Landis yesterday disapproved of a deal involving the exchange of Players Tom Jenkins and Jack Kloza between the St. Louis Browns and the Milwaukee club of the American association. He ordered the players returned, with Jenkins going back to the Browns and Kloza returning to Milwaukee.

DAWSON TO PLAY GARDNER TODAY FOR GOLF CROWN

36 Hole Battle to Decide State Amateur Title.

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Either Warren Dawson, youngest star of the famous Dawson brothers of Wheaton or young George Gardner of Quincy will wear the first Illinois state amateur golf crown. They swept into the finals of the championship battle today, Dawson romping home with a 6 and 5 conquest over Quincy's golfing political boss, C. L. [Chink] Weems, and Gardner winning a 20 hole struggle against Jimmy Garard of Chicago, 1 up.

They will play over the 36 hole route on the Quincy Country club course for the title tomorrow.

In their quarter final matches in the morning Dawson eliminated another Chicagoan, George Dixon, 3 and 2, while Gardner defeated Bob Baldwin, still another Chicago star.

Loses 4 Up Lead.

While Dawson's triumph over Weems was the big surprise of the day because of its one sidedness, Gardner's overtime struggle with Garard was the one that thrilled the gallery. The young Quincy player, casting aside his own battered and rusted clubs for those of his club professional, took a 4 up lead at nine holes, but lost four of the next five holes, coming back. Then on the seventeenth, when Garard pulled his tee shot to the side of a ditch and hit his second to a trap, Gardner became 1 up again. But he ran into a near dead stymie on the eighteenth green and the match was squared again. They halved the 19th with par fours, each missing putts by an inch, but on the 20th, Gardner laid his rival a dead stymie and won the match.

Catching Weems off his game, Dawson didn't give his opponent a chance on the first nine holes, which netted him a 6 up lead. For the nine Dawson had a medal card of par 35 to Weems' 41. They halved the tenth with par 3s and on the eleventh Weems won his second and last hole of the uneven match with a par 4. Dawson got it right back on the twelfth to go dormie 6 and ended the struggle with a half in par 4 on the 13th green.

Garard Beats Day.

Weems crushed Yontz Bonnett, the husky milkman from Bloomington, 4 and 3, in the morning. Garard's quarter final victim was Winfield Day of Chicago, whom he defeated 5 and 4.

Bill Jordan and Johnny Van Northwick will meet in an all-Chicago final tomorrow for the consolation title. Jordan defeated Bill Fish of Rockford, 3 and 2, while Van Northwick eliminated C. A. Fifer of Quincy in today's 18 hole semi-final matches.

Kamrath Wins Wisconsin Boy Tennis Championship

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Robert Kamrath, Austin, Tex., today defeated Richard Weigler, Milwaukee, 6-2, 6-2, to win the Wisconsin state open boys singles tennis championship.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

Oakley Mann, who runs an auto and radio shop on Edwardsburg Road, Elkhart, Ind., has figured out why the Cubs have a higher rating in the National league than the White Sox have in the American. His score sheets reveal that the Cubs are playing too many games with the second division clubs whereas the Sox take 'em as they come, bar none.

Mr. Mann's letter containing his startling discovery follows:

"I would like to know who is manager of the Cubs. I have a bone to pick with him in this way. That the Cubs aint playing the other teams in proper turn according to my baseball sheets they have picked on Boston 4 times be cause they are very week Phill 4 times and Cinn 4 times. And in all my score sheets they have only play St. Louise 2 games in St. Louise and 2 at Chicago they only play Pitts once and Brooklyn once.

"I can't understand why they pick on the three week teams so darn much. And cast the 4 stronger teams to one side no wonder they can have so many games to their credit and not so long ago they were in 5 or 4 place.

"When do they think St. Louise or N. Y. has got a chance to play some of these week teams when they have them all the time. The White Socks are a much braver team than the Cubs look at the White Socks took on Washington and they was n't afraid of Washington either and what did they do with her.

"But the Cubs are a fraid to play a team stronger than them or just as strong. I say the Cubs are a big bunch of cowards or they would play the stronger teams as many as they do Boston and the other week teams. But they won't and I would like to know who make the matches between teams. I don't think the Cubs are elegible to second place because they dont play the game fair with other teams.

"I like the White Socks I have no fault with them they take on any old team and they dont crab all the time like the Cubs. They crab with the umpires and other players of other teams and you know people dont like to hear a bunch of squachers playing ball when they are drawing a big salery for playing ball. the white socks are real ball players they dont kick or say nothing when the umpires calls them out they take it but the Cubs turn an want to lick the umpire. They want to be bullies of the National league. and if I can get hold of the owner of the Cubs I'll tell him something to. I like to see a real ball game thats my real sport but I different than anyone els. I believe in playing fair and no one could change my idea. Its that way with my radio and auto work and I wont have it no other way.

"If the Cubs would play fair and not kick so much to the umpires and other players. I would rather listen to the Cubs games. but they played so unfair I dropped off the Cubs and listen to the White socks all the time now. I like the white socks. they are just like a gang of tigers They tackle anything that will tackle them. They dont pick on some one lower in the standings all the time like the Cubs.

"Well you can send me the owners address if you wish or forward this letter to him. When the Cubs plays honest then Ill turn in and listen to them but not until. Iv no kick about Bob Ellson I like his announcements only for one thing he dont like to have a team come to Chicago and win a ball game. Thats all. If I was a announcer Id share the ideas with Boston or St. Louise or Phil or any other team. No team is better an another.

"Well Ill close for this time and you can for word this letter to the owner or send his address and Ill write him just as I did you in this letter."

GIANTS LOSE TRAVIS JACKSON FOR CUB SERIES

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Travis Jackson, whose nose was broken by a bounding ball in the final game of the Giants' series with the Cardinals, will not be able to play again for at least ten days or possibly two weeks. This means that the Giants will not have his services in the six game series with the Cubs, which opens on Sunday and in which second place will be at stake.

It was not thought when he was hurt that the shortstop would be compelled to lay off that long.

ROBINS GUESS IT MIGHT RAIN, SO CUBS ARE IDLE

String of Double Headers Starts Today.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—Along about 1 o'clock this afternoon there were indications of impending showers. The threat was enough to give the Brooklyn club officials courage to announce that the fourth of the series with the Cubs couldn't be played because of "threatening weather." The idea, of course, was to make possible a double-header tomorrow.

LESTER SWEETLAND.

Not a drop of rain descended, at least nobody in the Cub party saw anything wet except the East river. The Brooklyn officials merely were showing that the depression finally has hit baseball in spots. Yesterday the Cubs drew less than 2,500, and up at the Polo Grounds the Giants did not attract that many.

String of Double Headers.

The Cubs now face a schedule that nobody except a gluttonous bargain seeker could enjoy. The Chicagoans must engage in two with the Robins tomorrow and then express their uniforms and Trainer Lotshaw to the Polo Grounds for double headers with the Giants on Sunday and Monday. The double bills at least will draw a few extra cash customers, but the true competitive feature will be submerged. A team winning the first half of a twin bill usually relaxes and gets mauhandled in the second portion.

It is refreshing to know that, despite the vigilance with which certain clubs seek an opportunity to bill a double header, this desire has not been evident in Chicago. It hasn't been necessary. The Cubs, despite the depression and the runaway race staged by the Cardinals, are practically tied in home attendance for the same number of home games in 1930. This statement is supported by actual figures, and for the Cubs 1930 was a good year.

Sweetland to Hurl.

For his pitching tomorrow Manager Hornsby is a bit uncertain. He probably will send Les Sweetland into the first game, and if that venture proves a success he'll either give them another left hander or Johnny Welsh in the second game. If he can do this, it will enable him to make his choice among Bush, Smith, and Malone for the Sabbath pair against the Giants. Uncle Robby is almost certain to pitch Thurston and Luque tomorrow.

Jimmy Adair, the overdue infielder from the Reading club, was still being looked for by Hornsby this evening, but there were no developments. Hornsby is beginning to believe that Adair is a mythical person and he'll think that way until he actually sees the lad. If Adair should happen to arrive before 1:30 tomorrow afternoon, he probably will be put to work at second base. If he remains a mysterious absentee Hornsby, whose heart is stronger than his legs, will try to hold down the post in at least one of the games.

SOUTH CHICAGO BEATS SEATTLE; REACHES FINALS

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Scoring two runs each in the fourth and sixth innings, South Chicago's American Legion junior baseball team advanced to the finals of the all-western tournament here today by defeating Seattle, Wash., 4 to 2.

South Chicago will play Stockton, Cal., tomorrow afternoon for the championship, Stockton having defeated New Orleans, La., 4 to 3 in a ninth inning rally. The winner goes to Houston, Tex., next week to meet the eastern champion in the "Little World" series.

Brilliant fielding in both the infield and outfield helped Al Lawlor, South Chicago hurler, to victory. Lawlor struck out ten, and 11 Seattle runners were left on the bases.

Alata, Chicago first baseman, hit two doubles and drew two walks in his four trips to the plate for a batting average of 1.000. Every run scored in the game was earned. Holem driving in three for South Chicago with a double and a triple and Lawlor sending in the fourth with a single. Haffner's double in the sixth inning drove in both Seattle scores. Score:

GOLFER SHOOTS A REAL BIRDIE, AND KILLS IT

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 21.—(AP)—A birdie one may not mean anything to most golfers, but to L. B. Frederickson of Essex, Ia., playing No. 13 on an Omaha links today, a birdie one means just that—a birdie in one.

As Frederickson drove toward the hole his ball scomed to a height of about 25 feet and struck a bird. The bird fell to earth, dead.

PASSES MIXED WITH A FEW HITS DECIDE RUNFEST

Stage Dizzy Contest Before 36,000.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The world champion Philadelphia Athletics and the White Sox saved the craziest game of the season for the 36,000 ladies' day spectators who assembled at Comiskey park yesterday afternoon. Even though the Sox came out with the comparatively little end of a 15 to 12 score, it was just a dandy day for the gals.

As the score indicates, there was action aplenty. You know how the ladies love action. And many a high soprano is hoarse this morning; there were so many things to cause squealing.

With so many runners dashing around the bases there naturally was some suffering and it was unfortunate, for the ladies' day angle, that two of the main sufferers were family men—Pat Caraway, the lovable bridegroom, and Victor Frasier, who also has a missus to inspire him.

Caraway Excused Quickly.

With the score tied at 4 to 4 and the bases full in the fifth, Pat [illegible] four [illegible] After [illegible] to relieve [illegible] and perform such other chores as confront a bridegroom.

The score was 10 to 8 in favor of the champs when Mr. Frasier came in. Singles by Foxx and Miller and the Athletics' second homer, by Williams, was all the ladies' day strain that Victor underwent.

To give you some idea of what an irrational contest the affair was, we'll first point out that the A's made their first eight runs in the first five innings with the aid of a total of three hits—two singles off Bob Weiland and that triple which Miller whisked off Caraway. They made all of their 15 runs on ten hits, whereas the Sox made 14 hits, but got only 12 runs.

Sox Hurlers Walk Ten.

Errors had something to do with the unusual ratio of runs to hits in the A's tabulation, but it was mostly accounted for in the wildness of the pitchers. Weiland walked five, made a wild pitch, and hit one batsman. Caraway walked one. Grant Bowler, a Sox rookie pitcher, who had much excitement in his first appearance in the majors, walked four. The A's pitchers were not so accurate either, for Walberg walked five and Mahaffey walked three.

Among the unusual statistical quirks due in part to wildness was the fact that the No. 1 and 2 batsmen in the A's batting order, Bishop and Cramer, scored eight runs, though they had only three and two times at bat, respectively.

Although he was blasted out of the game in a five run Sox rally in the sixth inning, Walberg got credit for his 18th victory of the season.

Wild Pitch Scores Bishop.

The A's got the first run through wildness in the first inning. Bishop singled and went to second on Cramer's sacrifice. Cochrane walked and was forced by Moore. Wetland then cast a wild pitch, Bishop scoring and Moore taking second. Foxx walked, but was forced by Miller.

The Sox tied the score in the second, and had the bases full when the light went out. Fonseca opened with a double, stopped at third on Fothergill's single, and came home on the first of Appling's three hits.

The A's took a 2 to 1 lead in the third without the aid of a hit. Bishop walked and pulled up at second while Cramer was landing at first on a fumble by Sullivan. Cochrane sacrificed and Bishop scored on Moore's fly to Fonseca. Fonseca got a tough error when his throw to third got lost in confusion between Sullivan and

GEORGE DAWSON, MORRELL LEAD IN ANNUAL ROUNDUP

Tie with 76 in First Day's Play.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

A band of 128 golfing buckaroos rode over the rolling ranges of the Glen Oak Country club yesterday in the first day of the club's fifteenth annual roundup. It is one of the oldest invitational tournaments in the Chicago district, and the 47 foursomes which competed yesterday constituted the largest field in its history.

GEORGE DAWSON.

Play will be concluded with the final 18 holes today, but a portion of the prize list already has been packed away on the basis of yesterday's performances.

Two Tie for Lead.

A couple of cowboys from the home ranch, George Dawson and John Morrell, the latter the present club champion, appeared to have lassoed a share of the low gross prize for the first 18 holes, each coming in with a 76. Their cards were reversed, George going out with 37 and returning with a 39, while John's first nine read 39. The difference lies in the 15th hole, where Dawson came out with a disastrous 6, while Morrell was compiling a birdie three.

Best Ball Match Tomorrow.

Among the leading net scores yesterday were Ed Middleton, Glen Oak veteran, who had 97-27-70, and F. S. Hopkinson of Glen Oak, with 99-19-70. A quartet composed of P. F. Kuhlman and Scott Joy of Glen Oak, Blake Wilson of La Grange, and E. E. Davis of Midlothian was leading in the low net guest, with a 306.

Glen Oak is now in the process of conducting its biggest week-end of the season, for in addition to the roundup, there is tomorrow's 18 hole best ball match, with Billie Burke and George Von Elm, National open champion and runner-up respectively, meeting Harry Cooper of the home club and Horton Smith. Miss Roesslein Loses, 3-2, in Park Golf Semi-Final Margery Roesslein, favorite to win the women's Illinois public parks golf tournament, failed to get past the semi-finals yesterday at Lincoln park. She was defeated, 2 and 2, by Mrs. H. V. Cooper, also of Lincoln park.

In the other semi-final Mrs. Harry Langer, Lincoln, eliminated Mrs. Kathryn Frieder, Jackson park, 3 and 6, making the 36 hole final today an all Lincoln affair.

Miss Roesslein did not get her usual distance off the tees yesterday, the slice that has bothered her all week still was in evidence, and she was weak on the greens.

Makes Turn 2 Up.

Mrs. Cooper played a steady game, seldom being in trouble and using three putts only once. She won three of the first nine holes, turning 2 up. Starting back Miss Roesslein won the first two holes, the long 10th with a birdie and the 11th with a par 4, where Mrs. Cooper used her only extra putt. This squared the match, but on the 12th Miss Roesslein missed a short putt, while Mrs. Cooper got around a half stymie for a birdie 4. She lost her lead on the 13th with a short approach, but took the next three holes and the match.

At the 14th Miss Roesslein's tee shot went wild and she dubbed into a trap. At the 15th she boosted her approach over the green and then went over again and three putted, while three putts at the 16th put her out for good. The cards:

Mrs. Cooper—out	755	535	365—44
Miss Roesslein—out	855	547	355—47
Mrs. Cooper—in	654	536	3
Miss Roesslein—in	545	457	4

Mrs. Langer Easy Winner.

Mrs. Langer had an easy time, Mrs. Frieder winning only one hole of the 12 played. The Lincoln park player was 5 up at the turn.

The cards:

Mrs. Langer—out	757	545	445—46
Mrs. Frieder—out	957	556	356—52
Mrs. Langer—in	744
Mrs. Frieder—in	835

In the first flight Alice Tieken and Mrs. Wyeta Baugh, both of Hickory Hills, will meet in the final.

In the playoff for the approaching and putting prize among Mrs. Cooper, Miss Roesslein, and Mrs. G. A. Connell, Mrs. Cooper again defeated Miss Roesslein, scoring 7 points to 9 each for the other two.

The summary of the semi-final round:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT.

Mrs. V. S. Cooper, Lincoln, defeated Margo Roesslein, Lincoln, 3 and 2.
Mrs. Harry Langer, Lincoln, defeated Mrs. Kathryn Frieder, Jackson, 8 and 6.

FIRST FLIGHT.

Miss Alice Tieken, Hickory Hills, defeated Mabel Ford, Columbus, 2 and 1.
Mrs. Wyeta Baugh, Hickory Hills, defeated Mrs. B. Martin, Jackson, 6 and 4.

CHAMPIONSHIP CONSOLATION.

Mrs. R. Levey, Jackson, defeated Mrs. G. E. Light, Lincoln, 2 and 1.
Mrs. J. Jamieson, Lincoln, defeated Mrs. Josephine Baltrusis, Columbus, 5 and 3.

Helen Moody, 3 Britishers in Semi-Finals

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 21.—(AP)—The union jack waved triumphantly over the ramparts at Forest Hills tonight after an embattled day that saw three British Wightman cup team stars sweep into the semi-finals of the 44th national women's tennis championship.

Alone of the huge American field that started play Monday, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody of San Francisco, survived. The six times champion calmly brushed aside another opponent after having watched her fellow Californians whipped all afternoon.

Mrs. Harper Loses.

Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall, seeded no higher than fourth on the foreign list, supplied most of the day's fireworks with a stirring three-set victory over Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., seeded No. 3 on the American list, 3-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Phyllis Mudford, another British representative, attended to Mrs. Lawrence Harper of Oakland, Cal., America's official No. 1 player, 4-6, 6-3, 8-6. After dropping the first set, in which Mrs. Harper won the first four games with her peculiar chop stroke, the chunky British girl came back to blast her left handed rival hither and yon the rest of the way. As a result of her strong showing in the last two sets it was predicted Miss Mudford would give the great Moody more than usual competition in their semi-final bout tomorrow.

Betty Nuthall Wins.

If she does, it will be more than little Dorothy Weisel of Sacramento was able to accomplish today. Suiting her game to that of her opponent, Mrs. Moody played a soft, careful stroke all the way to win by scores of 6-1, 6-2. She was content to maneuver her less experienced opponent out of position and then smash over a placement.

Betty Nuthall, England's third winner for the day, had similarly easy sailing in eliminating her countrywoman, Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Barron, 6-2, 6-1. Blond Betty, playing at the top of the form that sent her through to the championship a year ago, was a pronounced favorite to win from Mrs. Whittingstall tomorrow and enter the finals.

Third round doubles matches resulted as follows:

Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Cal., and Dorothy Round, England, defeated Mrs. L. A. Harper, Oakland, Cal., and the Baroness Levi, Italy, 6-4, 6-2. Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall, England, defeated Penelope Anderson, Richmond, Va., and Virginia Rice, Boston, 6-4, 6-2.

Two World Marks Set in Casting Meet

Jules P. Cuenin of San Francisco, Cal., 1930 champion, who is leading all other contestants for the all around championship, and Karl Kainser, Cleveland, O., broke two world records in the annual tournament of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs yesterday at Washington park.

Cuenin, competing in the ¼ ounce distance bait event, scored an average of 321.6 feet, breaking the mark of 279.4 feet made by W. C. Newcomb of Buffalo, N. Y., last year. In the same event, Kainser had a long cast of 344 feet, which broke the record of 303 feet, held by Leo Connolly, Cleveland.

The Salmon fly distance test, which opened yesterday's competition, won by Connolly, who had an average of 150.2 feet. Two other Chicago contestants finished second and third in the event. They were Eddie [illegible] den, who took second place with [illegible] feet, and A. A. Trimble, with [illegible] feet.

Competition will be held in the fly unknown distance and the ¼ accuracy bait events today. The will end tomorrow.

Injury to Keep Bill Cissell Out Several Weeks

Bill Cissell, White Sox shortstop, who was injured in Thursday's game with the Athletics, will not return to the Sox lineup "for some weeks," according to Dr. Philip Kreuscher, the club physician.

"Cissell, in covering second base Thursday, tore the ligaments of the inner side of his knee," the doctor said, "and I cannot say definitely when he will be able to play again. However, there is a possibility that he may participate in the charity game on Sept. 9."

Braves Score 2-1 Triumph Over Pirates

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The Braves upset the Pirates, 2 to 1, today, taking a 2 to 1 edge in the series. Wally Berger's 17th home run of the season was the hit which gave Ben Cantwell an edge in a hurling duel with Ervin Brame.

Rabbit Maranville performed like a youngster at shortstop in support of Cantwell with several sensational stops. Pittsburgh's run followed an error by Fred Maguire. Score:

RUTH HITS THREE TIMES; GAINS IN BIG SIX RACE

With Al Simmons still out of the lineup and all the National league members of the Big Six kept idle by the weather, the stage was all set yesterday for Babe Ruth to make a big gain in the standing of baseball's slugging sextet. The Babe came through with three hits, one of them his 35th homer of the year, in four trips to the plate for a four point gain. He now is ten points behind Simmons. Eddie Morgan, the only other Big Six member to play, lost three more points, going hitless three times. He fell below Virgil Davis, National league leader. The standing:

Argentine 4 Wins Practice Game, 12 to 5

Westbury, L. I., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Two of the teams entered for the open polo championship went through practice matches this afternoon, Santa Paula of Argentina in a very informal scrimmage with army players at Mitchel field and the Hurricanes in a more formal game at the Roslyn Polo club. Santa Paula came through a game which had no referee for three periods by a score estimated at 12 to 5. The Hurricanes defeated a pickup side, which totaled 17 goals on handicap, by a score of 15 to 5.

Santa Paula played against the army team of Lieuts. McDonald Jones, D. T. Craw, and F. W. MacKinney and Capt. John Smith.

Andrada Is Injured.

In the sixth period, Manuel Andrada had a fall which hurt his wrist slightly and he retired. Juan Reynal was refereeing at the time and he went into the game, which was finished without a referee, soldiers on the sidelines throwing in the ball when it went out.

The pace was never very fast, but Santa Paula had no trouble in getting out in front and staying there.

Hurricanes Use Stars.

On the field at Roslyn the Hurricanes played their 31 goal lineup of Stephen Sanford, Winston Guest, Capt. C. T. I. Roark and Raymond Guest against a team composed of Robert Lehman, Dr. John Richards, Dan Kearney of Argentina, and Dunbar Bostwick. They led, 2 to 1, at the end of the first period and added to that lead steadily through the rest of the game. Raymond Guest played well at back through most of the game, Sanford hit accurately for goal, and Capt. Roark occasionally turned in a burst of speed. Summary:

HURRICANES [15].		ROSLYN [5].
S. Sanford	No. 1	R. Lehman
M. Guest	No. 2	Dr. J. Richards
Capt. C. Roark	No. 3	D. Kearney

Plans Leagues for 2,800 Rifle Clubs This Winter

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Leagues for the 2,800 rifle and pistol clubs affiliated with the National Rifle association will be an important feature of the association's indoor matches the coming winter.

Hornsby's Weak Legs May Yet Be an Asset to Cubs

The depreciation on Rogers Hornsby's legs, Hack Wilson's home run record, Ted Lyons' salary arm and various other ailing stars of the Cubs and White Sox may soon be a matter of official concern to the board of assessors.

Assessor John E. Conroy, secretary of the board, yesterday asked Cornelius J. Harrington, its attorney, for an opinion as to whether the contracts held by the ball clubs for the professional services of their players are taxable as personal property. Harrington promised an opinion on Monday.

"If the contracts are taxable," Conroy said, "I suppose we will have to allow the clubs the same depreciation on an aging outfielder's legs as we give the owner of a building when its floors begin to get shaky."

Griffith Ends Hard Drill for O'Kelly Today

Tuffy Griffith will rule only a slight favorite over Con O'Kelly when they meet in a ten round bout at White City Monday night.

O'Kelly in his workouts the last five days has battered several sparring partners into submission. He has a lightning like left jab and a terrific right hand.

Griffith will box with Harvey Mortensen and Jackie Williams today and do only light work tomorrow. O'Kelly will go several rounds with Tom Jones.

Joe Corbett, heavyweight who had Knute Dane on the floor seven times, will meet Charlie Young of Cicero in one of the six round supporting bouts. Young has scored three knockouts recently. Bob Stone, former C. A. A. U. champion heavyweight, faces Nick Taft in another six rounder. Taft holds a decision over King Levinsky.

Bill Baker faces Jack (Chief) Elkhart, rugged Indian boxer, in a four rounder. Young Stuhley clashes with Bobby Hynds of the south side in another four rounder. Steve O'Malley opens the show with Jackie Davis.

Church League Teams Play Title Semi-Finals Today

The baseball division of the Church Athletic association will start its championship semi-final games today. Schedule:

First Reformed or Englewood vs. Redeemer Lutheran, at Hamilton park.
Brighton Mission vs. First Christian Reformed, at Palmer park.
Bethany Presbyterian vs. Albany Park Methodist Episcopal, at Welles park.
Rogers Park Congregational vs. United Evangelical Lutheran, at Taylor park.

WILDNESS OF SOX PITCHERS HELPS A'S WIN, 15 TO 12

In the fourth the Sox got the quantity scoring idea under way. The bases were filled on a single and two walks, and then with two out Blue doubled, clearing the bases. About 38,000 persons thought they saw Blue get safely to third on the smack, but Umpire Ormsby outvoted them.

In the fifth Bishop walked with one down and Cramer got the second hit off Weiland, a single to left. Cochrane walked, filling the bases. Then Weiland hit Moore with a pitched ball, forcing in Bishop. Caraway appeared and pitched four straight balls to Foxx, forcing in Cramer. Then Miller tripled to complete a five run outburst. Jim Moore came in and both McNair and Williams flied to Fonseca. This made the score A's 8, Sox 4.

Bishop singled off Moore with one out in the sixth and trotted in when Cramer knocked a homer into the right field stand. This made the score 10 to 4.

Sox Score Five Times.

In the Sox half of the sixth the boys made five runs. Appling opened with his third successive hit and Kerr walked. Both runners scored on Grube's triple to right and Grube scored when Pinch Batter Jolley crashed a single off Foxx's glove. Norman ran for Jolley and reached second while Williams was throwing out Blue. He went to third on Sullivan's single, and at this point Mahaffey relieved Walberg. Reynolds' fly scored Norman and Fonseca's double scored Sullivan. Fothergill tapped to Williams for the third out. This made the score 10 to 9.

It was in the seventh that Frazier failed in his attempt to put on his usual hero act. Singles by Foxx and Miller and Williams' homer made the score 13 to 9 in favor of the A's.

The Sox hadn't finished, however, and again were only one short of a tie when they scored three runs in the seventh. With one out, Kerr and Grube singled, and when Bowler doubled, Kerr scored and Grube stopped at third. Grube scored on Blue's fly and Bowler counted on Sullivan's double. Reynolds failed to produce for the fifth time in the game when he ended the inning with a fly to Cramer. This made the score 13 to 12.

Bowler Yields 2 Runs.

Bowler was within one strike of getting out of trouble in the eighth, but Bing Miller walloped the next pitch to drive in the Macks' final two runs.

Of course, the Sox could not keep on rallying forever and their last two innings were nonproductive.

The A's will make their final appearance of the season this afternoon on the south side and it will be Frazier vs. McDonald.

IT'S LADIES' DAY AT SARATOGA; 3 CAPTURE STAKES

Leiter's Princess Camelia 2d in Troy Purse.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Women owners scored several successes here today, the feature race, the Troy claiming stakes, falling to Mrs. Charles Minot Amory's Towee, the Pittsfield purse to Mrs. William M. Moore's Gold Prize, and the North Creek purse to Mary L. Crawford's The Gen.

Towee was a 12 to 1 outsider in a field of 14 and came on from a position in the middle of the field to run down the leaders and win by a half length. Jean Bejshak was the winning rider and put on a rousing finish which gained the winner's share of the purse, $5,275.

Leiter Horse 5 to 2 Favorite.

The western filly Princess Camelia, owned by Joseph Leiter of Chicago, was made the 5 to 2 favorite, but finished second after having the lead on the turn and again just inside the furlong pole. The filly beat the Belair stud's colt Fair Eno a length and a half for the place. After that the order of finish was Lucky Tom, Snap Back, Renaissance, Dexterity, Watch Him, Even Up, Porgie, Whisking, Try Some, Poitou, and Brandon Prince.

Towee ran several good races in the metropolitan district and suffered such interference in several starts that his record does not look as good as it should. This may have contributed to the long price against the colt, which is by High Time from Blue Grass.

Gold Prize Closes Fast.

Mrs. Moore's horse, Gold Prize, won by half a length from Waterway which led Impish by a head in a test at a mile and an eighth. Waterway was the leader for most of the route, but was run down in the last few yards by the fast closing Gold Prize.

2 RECORDS FALL IN MICHIGAN ON OUTBOARD RACES

Manistee, Mich., Aug. 21. — [Special.]—Two world records were established as outboard motor boat drivers engaged in time trials on the Manistee lake course this afternoon preparatory to the opening of the central division championship regatta here tomorrow. Tom Estlick of Waukegan, Ill., broke all existing marks when he drove 53.235 miles an hour in class E, while Florence Burman, daughter of the late Bob Burman, auto racer, broke her own world's record for woman drivers in class C by speeding 48.219 miles an hour.

The record broken by Estlick formerly was held by Hank Ryan of Duluth, Minn., who is also here and is to make an attempt to regain his title Monday. Both marks will be official, according to James W. Mulroy, executive secretary of the National Outboard association, who was the official scorer. Competition races in the regatta will be held tomorrow and Sunday with additional time trials on Monday.

SHOOTERS GATHER AT VANDALIA FOR GRAND AMERICAN

Dayton, O., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Early arrivals here for the Grand American handicap tournament of the Amateur Trap Shooting association which will start Monday at Vandalia, north of here, will take part tomorrow in the pre-tournament.

Throughout today early arrivals participated in the registered shoot sponsored by the association. Scores indicated that championship records will be equaled, if not surpassed during the regular tournament.

Among the arrivals was Rufus A. King Jr., Wichita Falls, Tex., 15 year old Grand American tournament winner of last year, who is out to defend his crown. Though his right leg is in a plaster cast and he hobbled about the association clubhouse today on crutches as result of a fractured leg, the boy champion hopes to be on the range when the tournament opens Monday, with the cast removed.

ISTATENA WINS ASTOR TROPHY IN SLOOP RACE

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Istatena, owned by Chandler Hovey of Boston and sailed by his daughter, Elizabeth, won the Astor cup for sloops today. LADY VONIAN IS BEATEN IN JOLIET TROTTING STAKE

Aurora Grand Circuit Meet Closes.

Getaway day of the Grand Circuit meeting at Exposition park, Aurora, yesterday, was marked by happenings not officially scheduled. In the first race, the Joliet pace for three year olds, Lady Vonian, after winning the first heat handily from Calumet Budlong in 2:03 3-4, went a second heat without company.

Her driver, Dr. H. M. Parshall claimed he had gotten the word. Drivers of the other horses turned after crossing the starting line when they heard the recall bell, but Dr. Parshall contended there was no return signal. He claimed the heat and race.

He was overruled by the judges and after a delay started in the second official heat. It was run fast and Lady Vonian, tiring near the finish, was beaten by Calumet Brownie in 2:03. Calumet Brownie also took the next heat and the race, Lady Vonian finishing far back.

Another unusual incident came between heats of the second and third races. A performing donkey ran off a stage in the race track enclosure, breaking up the show. The lady ringmaster and a dozen volunteers chased the donkey, while the racers halted.

Drivers were fearful the donkey might leap the fence as they were speeding around the track. Eventually the donkey ran himself out of wind and surrendered, allowing the races to proceed. Summaries:

HAUSTEIN WILL PILOT FORD IN ROBY CONTEST

Race fans who go out to Roby speedway on Aug. 30 will see the Ford car that qualified in the Indianapolis race at 112 miles per hour. It is the same car that was piloted by Eugene Haustein in the 500 mile race and which finished the long grind just out of the money. On the dirt tracks of the east the car has been a winner all summer, and in the hands of Haustein next week is expected to give plenty of trouble to Wilbur Shaw, Johnny Wohlfiel, Bryan Salspaugh and other stars entered.

Another Indianapolis star to race is Chet Miller, who drives a Miller car, and who took tenth money in the Memorial day race. The race is to be 100 miles, which will give the better cars a chance. Shaw, Haustein and Miller must be given a good chance to win, as they have backers who keep their cars in good condition.

A. A. A. drivers are expressing considerable interest in the improvements which have been made to the surface of the turns, which are expected to allow greater speed.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Just the Man

FINDS LONG LOST MATE IN MOVIE; FIGHTS DIVORCE

Deserted in 1899 by Husband Now Actor.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Thirty-two years ago Mrs. Edwin Robotham, now 60, was deserted by her husband of six weeks, and for 30 years she searched for him without success. Two years ago she attended a London theater and saw the face of her husband, somewhat older but still recognizable, flash on the screen during the showing of an American picture, and now she is contesting a suit for divorce instituted by him in Portland, Ore.

In 1899, just six weeks after they were married, it was revealed today, Capt. Robotham deserted from the British army. Later he served for 23 years in the United States army and then was honorably discharged. Meanwhile Mrs. Robotham, believing it a disgrace to be deserted, did not reveal her situation even to intimate friends and continued her search for him. But when he recently filed suit for divorce she contested the action.

Was Believed Dead.

"I have not long to live and I do not want to end my life as a divorced woman," she said today. "I have spent my life looking for my husband, but several years ago I went to the courts and his death was presumed."

She had searched mortuaries and military records for a clue and looked all over England without avail. Then, in a film called "Buck Privates," she recognized an actor known as Capt. Ted Duncan as her missing husband. When she found the Hollywood company which produced the film unable to locate her husband, she wrote to the adjutant general of the United States army and finally received a reply saying that Robotham admitted his identity.

Offers to Forget Desertion.

"Since that day my husband has sent me $1 every week," she said. "He has written me and I have asked him to provide a home for us either here or in America, but he said he was too poor. I was still willing to keep my secret, however, and let no one know that he is alive, until three weeks ago, I was served with divorce papers. My husband has accused me of making him unhappy."

ARREST COMPANY HEAD ON WOMAN'S CHARGE OF FRAUD

Charles P. Keyes, head of the Poster Advertising company, with offices in the Pure Oil building, was arrested yesterday on a charge of selling securities without a state license. Miss Florence Carlson, 5324 Glenwood avenue said she gave Keyes $17,000 to invest some months ago, and that he returned to her $4,000 and a quantity of stock in his company, which she asserted is worthless.

On their way to the detective bureau with Keyes, Detectives John Howe and William Drury noticed a familiar face in the crowd which gathered when they left the building. While Drury guarded Keyes, Howe walked over and arrested E. J. O'Neil, 5015 West Adams street, a former policeman.

O'Neil who was dismissed from the police force for intoxication three years ago, was arrested recently on the charge of taking money from men on the promise that he would use influence to get them jobs on the police and fire departments. The new complaint on which he was arrested yesterday was signed by James Kelly, 7124 Calumet avenue, who charged that he gave O'Neil $150 to get him a job as a fireman and bought a fireman's uniform which he never had a chance to wear.

BREACH IN ELECTRIC LIGHT ASSOC. IS SEEN A PERSONAL MATTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—Further details of the clash between certain members of the National Electric Light association which led to the resignation early in June of the United Gas Improvement company, the Philadelphia Electric company, and the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey indicated that the cause of the breach was largely a personal matter.

The explanation advanced by an official in touch with the situation was that Vice President Percy S. Young of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, together with one or two other candidates, was defeated in balloting for the post of fourth vice president of the association early in June at the Atlantic City convention.

President Harry Reid of the National Electric Power company, in the Insull group, won the post of fourth vice president at these elections. It was indicated that President Thomas N. McCarter of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey regretted the failure of his associate to obtain the post and brought about the resignation of his company from the national organization. John E. Zimmermann, United Gas Improvement Head, followed this move on the basis of personal friendship.

BEDFORD SHIRT COMPANY RENTS WEST SIDE SHOP

Leases Space at Madison and Crawford.

BY AL CHASE.

The Bedford Shirt company has leased the east store in the building at the northeast corner of West Madison street and Crawford avenue from the Walgreen company for a term of ten years at an undisclosed rental beginning Sept. 1, 1931. The store has a frontage on West Madison street of forty-four feet, with a depth of eighty-one feet.

Title to the nine apartment building at the northeast corner of Coles avenue and 74th street has been transferred by Dr. Joseph Butt and the Woodlawn Trust and Savings bank, trustee, to the Seventy-fourth and Coles Building corporation. The building occupies a 55x110 lot and contains six suites of five rooms each and three of four rooms.

Details on Oak Park Deal.

Details were made public yesterday by the George R. Hemingway organization regarding the business building now under construction at the northeast corner of Marion street and North boulevard, Oak Park, part of the first floor of which already has been leased to Montgomery Ward & Co. for a term of years. The building will front sixty-eight feet on Marion street and seventy feet on North boulevard. It is so planned that later when needed it can be extended to a frontage of 166 feet on Marion.

Holabird & Root have designed a building which will be extremely modernistic, with large strips of glass set in polished metal on both lower and upper floors. Both floors will be used for commercial purposes. There also will be an unusually high basement. The building is being erected by Holmes and George Forsyth, who expect it will be ready for occupancy Oct. 1. William Wright of the Hemingway organization negotiated the Ward lease.

Substation Permit for $340,000.

A building permit calling for an expenditure of $340,000 has been taken out by the Commonwealth Edison company for the substation to be erected at 11-15 North Wabash avenue on a 40½x162½ site, as told about in this department on June 24, 1931. Holabird & Root are the architects and the Herlihy Mid-Continent company has the contract. The building will be seven stories. The total cost of the fee and leaseholds is reported to have been approximately $1,000,000, or at the rate of $25,000 a front foot.

Title to the property at 314-16 South State street, 20x100, improved with a four story building, has been transferred by Katherine Isham Farwell and Harriet Isham Carpenter to Henry P. Isham, Arthur Farwell, and George B. Carpenter, second, as trustees. The trust will end on June 1, 1946.

CIGARET OUTPUT IN JULY SHOWS 9.7 PCT. DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—Cigaret production in July showed a sharp decrease of 9.7 per cent under last year, the internal revenue bureau announced today. The drop was 1,159,312,000 from July, 1930, the largest monthly decrease this year.

The largest previous decrease was in January, when production slumped 840,000,000 cigarets under the corresponding month in 1930.

The abnormally large decrease shown last month is the more sharply accentuated when compared with the relatively small loss of 2¾ per cent registered in June last, under June, 1930, and more than offsets the gain shown by the industry for the first half of 1931, over the first half of 1930, leaving a loss in production for the seven months ended July 31 of 1,151,949,967 cigarets, or 1.06 per cent, as compared with the same period last year.

While the substantial loss in July production would seem to indicate a reversal of trend in one of the few industries to achieve a notable progress in the face of the virtually universal business depression, in any comparison of the July production with the corresponding month in 1930, it must be borne in mind that in July last year production was 118,580,840,000 cigarets, which represents the largest monthly production in the history of the cigaret industry.

ORANGE GROWERS INCREASE ADS TO MOVE CROP

Aggressive advertising, a bumper crop of near record proportions, combined with a firm price structure are among the factors which are benefiting the citrus fruit farmers of California, according to the Business Outlook, published monthly by the Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust company of San Francisco.

Last year the California orange growers spent $1,300,000 for advertising. This year they are spending $1,600,000. The citrus crop this year is exceptionally heavy — 17,370,000 boxes of Valencia oranges against 10,922,000 a year ago, and 5,933,000 boxes of lemons, compared with 5,150,000 in 1930. Shipments of oranges to the east were heavy in July and were marketed at $2.67 a box f. o. b., as against $2.12 in June. Lemons brought higher prices—$5.10 a box in July, against $4.46 in June, and $5.61 a year ago.

VOTE TRUE BILLS AGAINST TWO ON GAS TAX FRAUD

Indictments were voted against two alleged gasoline bootleggers yesterday in the campaign of public officials and the petroleum industry to stamp out gas tax evasion.

J. C. McGuin, president of Oils, Inc., and Abe Allen, president of the Midway Refining company, were reported named in true bills voted by the grand jury charging violations of the state motor fuel tax law. McGuin is charged with shipping gasoline into the state without license or bond, and Allen is alleged to have withheld $50,000 taxes collected from consumers.

Attorney General Carlstrom and Mayor Cermak yesterday pledged their support to the gas tax evasion committee formed by the Standard, Pure Oil, Sinclair and Texas companies.

BANDITS ROB WAREHOUSE.

Burglars yesterday broke into the warehouse of the R. Cooper, Jr. company, 509 East Illinois street, distributors of refrigerators, and escaped with $90 and $103 in checks.

APPEAL IS FILED BY CARLSTROM IN TRANSIT LINE

Attorney General Carlstrom filed with the state Supreme court yesterday an appeal from the decision of Judge Stanley Klarkowski holding that the transportation program for Chicago is legal and valid. As a test of the laws and ordinances relating to that plan, he filed quo warranto proceedings in the Circuit court, and the appeal is in accordance with the plan announced when the suit was started. The contentions made by the attorney general in the appeal are the same as he presented in Chicago. A state Supreme court decision on the transit plan is deemed advisable before investors are asked to buy the securities of the new company.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 500; hogs, 4,000; sheep, 500.

Yesterday's market for cattle and hogs was unsatisfactory to sellers, prices sinking to low levels on all but best grades. The lamb market, however, showed a little strength after four days of declining prices.

The trend of the market reflected the trend of the market on dressed meats. Best grades were fairly active, but cheaper grades, which predominated, worked into lower ground.

In the hog market Friday top lightweight butchers held steady, the top being $7.25 and equal to Thursday's high mark. The average, however, dropped to $5.70, the lowest in many years. The bulk of all weights and grades turned within a spread of $4.40@7.10, and packing sows ranged down to $4.00 and slightly below for rough, heavy offerings.

Aside from the best lightweights, prices were weak to 25c lower and the market closed mostly 50c below a week ago. Three weeks ago best hogs sold at $8.30, and a year ago Friday the top price was $11.75.

Lambs at $8.10.

Best lambs sold at $8.10, or 10c above Thursday's top. Less desirable grades failed to show any strength, and the general market closed unevenly, but sharply lower than the previous week's close.

Five loads of choice western lambs sold to packers at $8.10, and one load of choice natives brought the same price to city butchers. Most of the fair to good native lambs brought $7.00@7.75, with culls ranging down to $4.00.

The market during the week was lower for the first four days, and losses amounted to 75c@$2.00. Heavy lambs showed most decline, and some were sorted out of load lots at $4.00, which sold up near the top of the market last week.

Bulk of fat lambs this week changed hands at $4.75@7.85, compared with $5.25@8.50 last week. A year ago the bulk changed hands at $8.50@10.50, and two years ago it was a $12.50@13.65 market on the bulk.

Cattle Quality Plain.

Cattle quality was unusually plain Friday, and buyers showed little disposition to take them. The trade was slow, although only 1,500 cattle were on sale. Most offerings were originally from southwestern grazing sections, and prices ranged largely from $5.50@7.25. Odd lots of inferior, low grade steers, some of canner flesh, sold to killers at $3.50@4.50.

The same trend prevailed in other branches of the cattle market. Butcher stock met slow sale, bulls were dull, and stockers and feeders lacked the active tone that was evident earlier in the week. Veal calves alone were in brisk demand and advanced 50c, closing at the week's peak, or $1.00 above a week ago.

Other classes closed the week on a lower basis, butcher stock being 25@ 50c off, bulls weak to 15c lower, bulk of common and medium steers 25@ 50c off, and good and choice grades strong to 25c higher. This two way trend in the steer market created further width in the price range. Top grades are selling at new high prices since early in the year, and bottom grades are about as low as they have been during the depression.

CHICAGO BANKS KEEP WATCH ON 'RED' ACTIVITIES

Warned of Plot to Cause Trouble.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Mysterious messages to several Chicago brokerage houses yesterday to the effect that a "financial crisis" is exchanging brought to light the fact that Chicago bankers have received information of a communist plot to bring on a renewal of bank troubles.

Whether the plot extends beyond Chicago is unknown but the presidents of one of the largest banks said yesterday that he had received telephone calls from bankers in other cities inquiring concerning rumors they have heard that some important adverse news was impending.

Information concerning a Communist plan to unsettle public confidence was given to several Chicago financiers about three weeks ago and coincident with the appearance in Chicago of William Z. Foster, Communist leader, at the time of the rent eviction rioting among south side Negroes. It was reported then that the plot was to spread disquieting rumors after Foster had left Chicago and to follow up these rumors by attempts to engineer "runs" by depositors on one or more of the big downtown banks.

Keep Careful Check.

"As the result of the information we received, we have joined the police in keeping a careful check on Communist activities," another banker said. "Up to now there have been only a few vague rumors and the police reports are that Communist activities have been discouraged by the force of the rent rioting. However, we are still conducting quiet investigation with the purpose of nipping in the bud any Communist plot. It would scarcely be an exaggeration to say that the big Chicago banks are in the strongest condition in their history and so are prepared for any eventuality but we do not want any new banking troubles and we do not propose to let any Communist propaganda campaign get under way."

The big Chicago banks now have more money than they know what to do with as the result of current trade quietude. Offers of large deposits have been received recently from eastern concerns and individuals asking better interest rates than prevail in the east. Such offers have been met with replies that Chicago banks have little use for additional deposits and would pay only one-half of 1 per cent interest.

Item Upsets Markets.

Another disquieting influence in Chicago and New York financial districts yesterday was a lengthy item carried by one of the news tickers suggesting that the big steel companies will announce wage reductions following recent reductions affecting salaried employés.

"The question of wage rates is occupying almost the undivided attention of leading steel authorities at present, and there is a likelihood that an announcement of a reduction of 10 to 15 per cent may be made in the not distant future," the item read. "While some interests in the industry still hope to be able to avoid making a cut in wages there is a growing feeling that economic conditions will necessitate the action. This would bear out the contention of those who have been arguing for several months that a general reduction in wages is needed to bring costs down to a point where the leading companies can show some kind of a showing in net on the amount of gross business transacted."

How Mail Order Firms Complete Merger Survey

Reports were current in financial circles yesterday that several meetings have been held between representatives of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. for the purpose of discussing the engineering survey or report said to have been completed recently on the possibilities of a merger between the two large merchandising establishments.

Ask Closing of Exchange on Saturday Before Labor Day

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

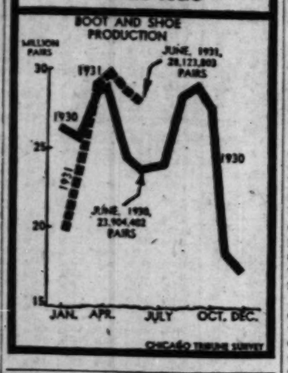
New York, Aug. 21.—A petition being circulated on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange seeking a holiday on Saturday, Sept. 5, the Saturday preceding Labor day. The petition has 258 signatures. The cotton, rubber and metal exchanges have already voted a holiday on Sept. 5.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders expect a stronger market today, based on a confirmation of the sale of 25,000,000 bu of wheat in exchange for 1,050,000 bags of Brazilian coffee. It injects a new element into the situation and with the probable sale of 15,000,000 bu of wheat to China, although made for distant shipment, puts the wheat situation in a better light than heretofore. Traders mainly are in the mood for a change for the better and are buying of wheat on all soft spots. President Hoover is quoted in Washington as saying that there is no limit to the quantity of wheat that the farm board can sell to China.

Liquidation in September corn gradually is bringing that month down under the December. The premium of September over December at the close yesterday was less than 4c. One of the largest corn traders says that December is expected to sell at a premium under December. The same opinion also is held by a number of other operators.

BOOT AND SHOE PRODUCTION IN SLIGHT DECLINE STILL AHEAD OF A YEAR AGO



BOND PRICES SINK ON HEAVY SELLING RAILS AT NEW LOWS

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Selling pressure was the dominant feature on the bond market today. Sales totaled $9,688,000 at par value, the largest total for a full session since July 16, when the turnover amounted to $10,019,000, compared with $7,796,000 yesterday.

Wide losses were more numerous among foreign obligations than in the other groups. German loans started the day firm but net declines in them ranged from fractions to 26 points in the case of Heidelberg 7½s. Losses in Argentine loans ranged upward to 3 points.

The breadth of the decline in railroad issues may be realized from the fact that such active issues as Baltimore and Ohio 4½s of 1293 and of 1960, Union Pacific 4s of 1968, Big Four series E 4½s, Rock Island 4½s of 1960 and 4s of 1934, Delaware and Hudson refunding 4s, Nickel Plate series C 4½s, and New Haven collateral 6s were among a group which reached new low levels.

The downward movement extended to the public utilities and industrials but the losses among them were not so wide and the volume not so great as in the rails. Loans of the United States government were more active and they closed lower also after showing temporary firmness.

Two Companies Set High Record in Stockholders

President A. R. Erskine of the Studebaker corporation reports 31,028 stockholders as of Aug. 10, 1931. This is the largest number of stockholders in the history of the corporation and compares with 29,348 in August, 1930, and 20,051 in August, 1929.

The number of stockholders in Public Service Corporation of New Jersey reached a new high record July 31, with a total of 87,154. This figure compares with 85,475 shareholders listed at the beginning of this year, and 83,720 at the beginning of 1930.

Stock of May Radio Sags to $5.50 a Share

May Radio and Television corporation stock plunged to $5.50 a share in the over the counter market yesterday following the suspension of trading in issue by the New York curb exchange. Later in the day the issue was quoted around $7 a share.

At the same time the Illinois security department issued a ruling ordering the firm of Mathews & Co., 105 West Adams street, to show cause why its security dealer license should not be revoked. The Mathews concern has conducted an intensive selling campaign in the stock and has distributed several thousand shares in middle western states at retail prices ranging from $12 to $19 a share.

Rupert F. Bippus, head of the securities department, also announced that he had instructed A. Wayne Clemens, head of the Chicago office of the department, to issue a similar ruling asking May Radio and Television corporation to show cause why its permit to sell its stock in this state should not be canceled.

Has "Market to Contend With."

E. W. Simon, president of Mathews & Co., told a reporter yesterday that his firm knew of no reasons why the curb exchange has suspended trading in May Radio. He said he knew nothing of the security department ruling. He refused to answer other questions concerning methods of selling and the personnel of the company. He was unable to give more than a few minutes for the interview, he said, "because he had the market to contend with."

John Landis, formerly head of Landis & Co., who has an office in Mathews & Co. quarters in the Bankers' building, stated that he is not an officer of the company. His connection with the firm, he asserted, is that of wholesaler and that he has nothing to do with the secondary distribution of stock made by the concern.

Landis said that he obtained an option on several thousand shares of May Radio stock below the market price which he sold to the Mathews firm which, in turn retailed the issue. In conversation with the reporter a few days ago Landis admitted that May Radio was being "supported" on the curb exchange during the retail selling campaign. Asked if the firm would continue its support Landis observed that "stocks have a tendency to settle" after the retail distribution is completed.

No Relations with Brokers.

D. W. May, president of May Radio, said in New York yesterday that curb officials had given him no explanation of the suspension action. "However," he added, "we have been informed unofficially that this suspension was not based upon the company financial standing and does not reflect thereon in any way, but that they have taken this action, so far as we can ascertain, because they do not approve of the methods used by some brokerage houses who were dealing in the stock of this corporation. With these brokers," he declared, "we had no contracts or relations."

Another stock selling concern, Loren & Co., 120 South La Salle street, was cited by the securities department yesterday to show cause why its license should not be forfeited. The firm has used long distance telephone solicitation in selling its stock. It has been dealing in Pines Winterfront stock, which is listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange, and other issues.

ADMIT DEAL IS UNDER WAY FOR BIG OIL MERGER

Standard of Cal. and N. J. May Unite.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—That negotiations looking toward a consolidation of the Standard Oil Company of California and Standard Oil Company of New Jersey into a $2,400,000,000 concern are under way was admitted at the office of the former company here today.

K. R. Kingsbury, president of the California concern, and W. C. Teagle, president of the New Jersey company, and certain of their associates are meeting at Lake Tahoe seeking an acceptable plan. It is understood that auditors of the New Jersey company have been going over the books of the local firm for three weeks.

W. C. TEAGLE. [U. & U. Photo.]

Current negotiations mark a resumption of the discussions between both parties carried on two years ago but suspended pending some indication of the attitude the United States government would take. This was furnished recently, when the administration decided against testing the legality of the consolidation of Standard Oil of New Jersey and Vacuum.

See Other Consolidations.

In well-informed quarters it had been believed that the New Jersey company would acquire the Standard Oil companies of Ohio and Kentucky to consolidate its refining and marketing east of the Mississippi before resuming its discussions with the California company.

The nation-wide scope of two large competitors of Standard of California has strengthened the belief that an alignment would be sought with the New Jersey concern or it would expand on its own into the middle west and east and into the oil-producing areas of Europe. The official statement follows:

To the press:

Resuming discussions tentatively initiated more than two years ago, Messrs. W. C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil company [New Jersey], and K. R. Kingsbury, president of Standard Oil Company of California, with certain of their associates, are now meeting at Lake Tahoe, Cal. The purpose of the meeting is to consider a mutually acceptable plan for the merger or consolidation of the two corporations.

[Signed] Standard Oil Company of California.

Would Be Largest Oil Unit.

A consolidation of the New Jersey and California companies would not only create the largest corporation organization in the oil industry, but one of equal magnitude with the two billion dollar United States Steel corporation. From the standpoint of assets it would probably be ahead of the Steel corporation and second only to the American Telegraph and Telephone company, with assets of more than three billion dollars. It would top by a very wide margin the recently created billion dollar Socony-Vacuum corporation and the contemplated Sinclair-Tidewater-Prairie Oil and gas combination.

Some interests in Wall street believe that Standard Oil of Indiana may be included in the consolidation, in which event the assets of the new company would exceed three billion dollars.

Would Boost Distribution.

The Jersey company, in spite of its great size and influence in the oil industry, has had a comparatively small expansion in its domestic territory, while other units in the industry have been reaching into new territory through the purchase of other companies. By merging with California and Indiana companies and taking in the smaller units in Ohio and Kentucky the combine company would have distribution in practically every state and throughout Canada.

By joining with Standard of California, the extensive marketing territory on the Pacific coast would be opened to the New Jersey company, together with the large refineries, production and extensive distributing facilities of the California company. An alliance with Indiana would provide extensive markets and extensive producing, refining and distributing facilities in the large midwest territory of that company. Most of the southern states would be entered through Standard Oil of Kentucky and Standard Oil of Louisiana, the later now being controlle by Standard New Jersey, and Ohio throug Standard Oil company of Ohio.

For a long time the New Jersey company has carried on a fully integrated oil business in Canada through its subsidiary, Imperial Oil Company, Ltd.

EVANS VIEWS FUTURE RISE IN USE OF COTTON

Joseph W. Evans, Houston cotton expert, last night told a dinner meeting of the Chicago Board of Trade that cotton consumption probably will increase greatly in the near future, and that "it is quite possible the world will consume fifteen million bales of American cotton next year."

Evans, member of the Houston firm of Evans & Co., said there are literally no stocks of finished cotton goods "on the shelves of the world."

"The entire cotton stock can be described as in the show window," he said. "It is fair to say that at the present attractive price consumption will be stimulated as in all previous low price eras."

Evans added, however, that prospects are for more than 24,000,000 bales, including last year's carry-over, or almost two years' supply, to be available the coming season.

He declared that Texas cotton farmers "were amazed" at the recent farm board suggestion that one-third of the growing cotton crop be plowed under to reduce the expected surplus. No power, state or federal, he said, could have prevailed upon the farmers to carry out the destruction.

Chesebrough Mfg. Co. Will Pay Usual 50 Cent Extra

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—A dividend of 40 cents a share has been declared on the common stock of the Engineers' Public Service company, compared with 50 cents in the previous quarter when the rate was reduced from 60 cents.

The Chesebrough Manufacturing company ordered the usual extra dividend of 50 cents a share. Directors of the Merrimack Manufacturing company have decided to omit the preferred dividend, due on Sept. 1. The Leyland and Birmingham Rubber Co. Ltd., has passed the ordinary share dividend for the year ended June 30.

Reexamines Ideas About Waterways to East Coast

BY SCRUTATOR.

A large part of the support for the proposed deeper St. Lawrence waterway has come from western wheat belt states. During and after the war when America was the world's bread basket and farmers were getting exceptional prices for their exported grain the proposal to facilitate outward movement of grain by water, thereby reducing transportation charges, gained favor with the agrarians.

This backing has remained largely intact in spite of the fact that the exportation of grain has ceased to be profitable. The farm board has not yet advised wheat farmers to plow under every third acre, but it has given them to understand that they have little to hope for in the future from foreign markets and that little can be done for them until their production is geared down to a domestic consumption basis.

Two Opposing Routes.

With conditions thus radically altered it may be well to reëxamine some of the old ideas about a waterway to the sea.

Two opposing routes have been proposed, the St. Lawrence and the all-American or New York state route.

"The estimate of tonnage which is available to move by the proposed St. Lawrence deeper ship channel in our export, import, intercoastal and coastwise commerce ranges from 18,600,000 to 23,600,000 tons," a 1927 department of commerce report stated. A similar estimate for the New York state canal was 14,900,000 to 20,000,000 tons.

By far the largest single item included in these computations, however, was wheat, and the importance of wheat as an export commodity has changed considerably since the survey was made.

The New York state route has the great advantage of lying directly in the path of the greatest volume of traffic between the vast producing areas of the west and the thickly populated manufacturing centers along the north Atlantic seaboard. It would, therefore, serve not only foreign trade but, decidedly more important, the intranational commerce between the seaboard and the central states.

Bulk Goes by Railroad.

It has been estimated that an annual traffic of approximately 140,000,000 tons flows down from the great lakes region into the New York territory, the bulk of it going by railroad. Only about 6 per cent goes into export.

No exact figures are available concerning the volume of this traffic. But they are hardly necessary to show that the eastern states, and not Europe, are the big consumers of our products.

The territory included in a triangle from Buffalo to Portland, Me., thence down to Washington and back to Buffalo contains roughly a third of the population of the country and consumes an estimated 60 per cent of the raw materials produced in the central states.

Eight great trunk lines connect New York and Chicago, and on these roads occurs the greatest density of traffic in the country. Between Chicago and Montreal there are only two trunk lines and a large part of the traffic handled by them is goods from one city to another in this country routed through Canadian territory to take advantage of differential rates.

May Be More Profitable.

If the railroads succeed in raising freight rates water transportation will become increasingly profitable and goods that are now being shipped by rail will swell the volume of traffic available to waterways.

Even the present limited facilities afforded by the New York state barge canal are attracting more shipping.

The other day Kohler company shipped 50 carloads of plumbing fixtures and fittings from Sheboygan, Wis., to Long Island City, New York, on the motorship Empire State by way of the New York barge canal. The 1,250 miles were covered in nine days. This was announced as a "test shipment with a view to probably increased use of all-water transportation not only to Atlantic coast cities, but also to points on the Pacific coast and to foreign ports."

U. S. RADIO SHARES SUFFER MOST IN CHICAGO SELLING

Late selling on the New York exchange accelerated the decline in prices on the Chicago exchange yesterday and issues of all classes finished the day below the previous day's final quotations.

U. S. Radio was the chief sufferer. The price dropped 2¾ points as stock was dumped on the market. Total transactions in the issue reached 12,000 shares. In other sections of the list the recessions were moderate. In only a few stocks did the net losses amount to more than a point.

Bendix sold higher in the early trade but weakened in the late trading and closed slightly lower. Extensive advertising of the firm's new vacuum clutch control device will begin shortly, it was learned.

Total transactions yesterday amounted to 70,000 shares, which represented only a slight expansion in trading over the previous day.

Retail Prices Drop 10 Pct. from January to August

Retail prices on Aug. 1 were 10 per cent below Jan. 1, according to the Fairchild Retail Price Index. Prices on Aug. 1 show a decline of 1.3 per cent as compared with July 1. Each month in 1931 to date has shown a decline under the previous month. The index is based on reports received from thirty outstanding retail organizations in various sections of the country, including independent and chain department stores, mail order chain stores and general chain stores.

With the exception of aprons and house dresses, and men's shoes, every item in the Fairchild Index shows a decline on Aug. 1 as compared with Jan. 1. The decline in several items has exceeded 20 per cent according to this index. The greatest decreases are recorded for silk fabrics, furs, musical instruments and luggage.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 21.—A report that the United States Steel corporation was about to announce its long expected cut in the wages of its mill employés caused the stock market to throw a little conniption fit in the late trading today.

Although nobody seriously doubted that the company's reduction of the salaries of its officials and white collar workers several weeks ago was a preliminary to a "readjustment" of the wages of its great army of overall workers, Wall street insisted on putting a bearish interpretation on the report and there was a general rush to sell shares of all descriptions.

Prices Fall Quickly.

Operators who had been endeavoring to arouse bullish enthusiasm by dint of price pegging where it would make the best showing withdrew to the sidelines and prices quickly fell below points reached in last Tuesday's reaction. The losses in the active list ranged as high as 5 points, with many high class issues among the heavy sufferers.

Shares of the United States Steel corporation itself reacted nearly 3 points, and such market mainstays as American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Atchison railway, Johns-Manville, American Can, Public Service, and General Electric broke from 1 to 4 points without much resistance.

Bears Open Drive.

The selling was general and few issues were able to muster support of any kind. Bear professionals improved the advantage offered by the upset in what the opposing element has been making bold to refer to as "returning public confidence" to open a drive in several sections of the list, notably in the oils, which have been going along so nicely for the last week, and in a lesser degree on the rails which have manifested some disposition to "come back."

Tobacco issues were naturally depressed by the figures made public earlier in the day showing an alarming decrease in cigaret sales, and it is possible that the news of additional bank failures in the middle west helped somewhat to make traders who have been buying stocks here of late a bit shaky. Profit taking spurred the descent of some of the best gainers of the late "bull market."

Before Selling Begins.

Until the selling wave swept over the market the rails had held up fairly well, considering the weakness in second grade carrier obligations.

Prospects of an unfavorable dividend action next week apparently were considered to have been discounted by the share trading element who had been given to understand that the Boston and Maine directors would decide to discontinue distributions on the junior shares and that New Haven directors would favor a more conservative dividend policy by trimming the quarterly payment of $1 a share, placing the common shares on a $4 annual basis.

When the steel wage rumor fixing the proposed cut at "10 or 15 per cent" came along, however, all these assurances as well as all the other "forward-looking news" upon which the bull brigade has been feeding were promptly forgotten and the rails were slaughtered with the rest. Union Pacific duplicated Atchison's tumble with a drop of 4¾ points, and New York Central, New Haven, Norfolk and Western, Southern Pacific and others gave way from 1 to 2 points each.

Better Oil News.

That the oils did not make a worse showing than they did probably was due in some measure to further indications in the day's news of a strengthening of petroleum prices. Although crude oil purchasers failed to post prices of $1 a barrel in Oklahoma as was anticipated they did show an inclination to mark up quotations. Gasoline prices also showed a firmer tone.

Motor shares joined in the decline without ado, continuing the movement that has been evident for several days reflecting uneasiness over prospective sales and production figures for the industry.

Individual features were more numerous than usual. Sinclair preferred jumped 7 points on one sale to a price of 97 on rumors that the stock might be retired in case the merger goes through. The shares are redeemable at 110.

Columbia Gas and Electric.

I bought some Columbia Gas and Electric stock. Will you please give me your opinion on this?—Mrs. J. F. R.

Columbia Gas and Electric corporation is engaged principally in the business of supplying natural and manufactured gas. It has important interests in electric utilities and minor interests in traction enterprises. On April 4, 1930, the company organized Columbia Oil and Gasoline corporation to take over its petroleum units. Columbia Gas controls all its outstanding stock. Undistributed earnings are not included in consolidated statements.

During 1930, 68 per cent of consolidated gross revenues was from sales of gas and 28 per cent from sales of electricity.

Its subsidiaries are grouped into six operating divisions. They include the Charleston, W. Va.; Cincinnati, O.; Columbus, O.; Dayton, Pittsburgh, and Binghamton, N. Y., groups.

At the close of 1930 gas fields totaled about 7,994,000 acres, of which 11 per cent was in production. A 20-inch natural gas pipe line from eastern Kansas gas fields to Washington, D. C., is to be completed in October, 1931.

Gross revenues totaled $96,129,808 in 1930, $100,328,875 in 1929, and $94,530,804 in 1928. The 4 per cent decline in 1930 from 1929 was attributed to abnormal weather, which reduced the consumption of gas, generally adverse business conditions and depression in the oil industry.

Net income for 1930 was $26,498,754, which was equal to $26.86 per share of preferred and $1.76 per common share. For 1929 net income was $32,161,139, which was equal to $32.60 per share of preferred and $3.12 per common share on a smaller number of common shares. Deficit, after dividends, in 1930 was $1,125,490.

For the six months ended June 30, 1931, net earnings available for the capital stock were $14,382,198, as compared with $16,569,093 in the first six months of 1930. Net for the three months ended June 30, 1931, was $5,442,187, as compared with $5,977,132 in the corresponding period last year.

At the close of 1930 there were outstanding 947,314 shares of 6 per cent preferred A [par $100], 29,298 shares of 5 per cent preferred [par $100] and 11,684,220 shares of no par common. Funded debt, after giving effect to the issuance of $50,000,000 debenture 5s, due 1961, in January, 1931, was $159,376,500.

The common is on an annual $2 dividend basis.

The preferred is high grade.

Wisconsin Public Service.

I would appreciate your opinion on Wisconsin Public Service company 4 per cent notes, due 1932.—L. W. G.

Wisconsin Public Service corporation $2,500,000 4 per cent notes offered in July, 1931, and due July 1, 1932, are reasonably sound.

LATE WEAKNESS IN CORN HITS WHEAT PRICES

Reported Coffee Swap Has No Market Effect.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish news failed to have a lasting effect on the wheat market yesterday, and while there was a moderate advance early on the continued unfavorable weather in northern Europe and strength in Liverpool, late weakness in corn and in the stock market led to selling and the finish was within a fraction of the bottom with net losses of ¼@¾c. September closed at 49¼c; December 53@53¼c, and May at 58@58¼c.

There was nothing in the general run of the news that was construed as bearish by the wheat trade and considerable that should have been factors in bringing about a higher level of values. The Canadian wheat pool report made the condition in the three prairie provinces 51, compared with its previous estimate of 52, and its figures on abandoned acreage suggested a loss of 5,400,000 acres, or 23.3 per cent based on the government estimate on the area seeded of 23,178,000 acres. Considerable grain has been cut for fodder but no estimate was made as to the size of the crop.

France Has Less Wheat.

While the trade had a report early in the day that the farm board would take Brazilian coffee in exchange for around 25,000,000 bu of its wheat stock, and later reports suggested that the exchange would be made, the proposed immense sale of grain, one of the largest in history, failed to have any effect on the market. Announcement that the agreement had been signed by representatives of the two governments was not received until after the exchanges had closed.

More and more the wheat trade is inclined to turn to Europe for signs of a revival in the world's wheat business, and those who feel that higher prices will ultimately be seen commented favorably on the Broomhall estimate indicating that including carryover and the 25,000,000 bu poor quality and probably unmerchantable grain France had only 264,000,000 bu wheat available for the 1931-'32 season compared with 287,000,000 bu last year, the small carryover more than offsetting the larger crop this season.

Spreading operations furnished a good part of the trade in wheat futures yesterday with purchases here against sales in the northwest, and there was also business under way between Chicago and Winnipeg. Winnipeg finished ¼@¾c lower with October at 56⅜c, while Liverpool was unchanged to ¼d higher, with October at 57½c. Europe continues to buy North American cash wheat in a persistent manner with sales of 500,000 bu reported in all positions.

September Corn Weakens.

While September corn was higher early there was a retreat of liquidation later, causing a drop of 1⅜c from the top and sold down to 42c, a new low for the season, with stop orders uncovered on the way down. The new crop months showed considerable resistance to pressure with the December selling within 3⅜c of the nearby future, the smallest spread so far. Further weakness in the cash market, where the basis was steady to 1c lower, had some effect on the September. Closing trades were ¼@¾c lower with September at 42¼@42⅝c; December, 38⅝@38½c, and May, 42⅝@43c.

The trade have an impression that the leading holder of cash corn has it hedged by sales of September, and unless there is a larger commercial demand for the grain they look for liberal deliveries. Unfavorable crop reports were received from the northwest during the day, but were offset by better comment from the more southern areas.

Oats were dull and finished ⅛c higher to ¼c lower with September at 20⅝c, December at 22⅜c, and May at 25c. Locals sold on an early advance while commission houses bought on the declines. Rye was ¼c higher to ⅝c lower at the last with September, 34¼c; December, 37⅛c, and May, 41⅝c at the last.

HEAVIER RUN OF HAY

There has been a slow but steady increase in the size of the daily run of hay during the current week, the Friday arrivals consisting of 13 cars of timothy or one of its mixtures and 4 cars of clover and 1 of rye straw. Demand remains excellent for the top quality receipts of hay, but straw is weak and easier.

COTTON UP EARLY; CLOSE IRREGULAR

Cotton prices were up 12@14 points early today, but the market throughout the session, within a comparatively narrow range, the advance mostly lost by the late trading there was little or no change from outlying trade on futures in the latter market were up 5 points while New Orleans was unchanged to 4 points lower. Liverpool was 5@6 points net higher. Sales were 3,000 bales, with Dec. American.

Dry deterioration is reported in Texas and a number of other localities, but traders are discounting it as a bull factor. The farmers of Louisiana held a conference to discuss methods of acreage reduction next year. Reports from the textile trade indicate no material change. Prices follow:
